UNIQUE FURNITURE

HARMONY should be the keynote for the decoration of home. Furnishings should be artistic and, in order to acquire this characteristic, they must be chosen with a view to their harmonious relation with other furnishings to be used in proximity. It is not necessary that all furniture in the same room be of precisely the same kind and style in order to secure harmony. In fact, an unusually pleasing effect is sometimes obtained by the use of odd pieces well arranged.

When the "no-period" style of interior decoration is used, it is possible to utilize many old-time pieces of furniture to good advantage. Pieces having the same general contour, color and other characteristics in common should be chosen from the collection and used together. When furniture of this type is employed in furnishing the home, the hangings, floor coverings, upholstery fabrics and wall coverings should be carried out as far as possible in shades of one color. Variety will be furnished by the miscellaneous collection of furniture, old tapestries, antiques in brass-ware, lampshades and other articles.

Furniture of the old New England type is popular at the present time. Copies of old pieces made up without upholstery are much used for cottages and country homes. Strength, durability and grace are characteristic of these reproductions. Such furniture finished in shades of brown, gray or white enamel to match the color scheme of the various rooms is particularly good for the upper portion of the house. It is practical and does away with the necessity of much polishing which is a nuisance in the country home. Canework is seen a great deal in these chairs, couch-backs and bed headboards. This adds to the lightness and beauty of the furniture. Elizabethan and Jacobean styles in chairs, tables and other articles are being suggested by architects and Sheraton furniture is also popular.

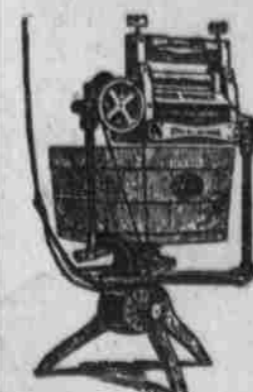

Numerous chairs handed down from the early days are being used in modern homes. These chairs are of many periods, from the "turned" chairs, the first found in America, to the rocking chair invented by Benjamin Franklin and the easy chair of a little later period. Rush bottoms and slat, or comb backs are characteristic of these, which include, besides the American models, the early Dutch, French and Windsor types. In many homes, along with these, antiques are used for lighting fixtures and they add much to the beauty of the rooms. Old lamps, candle-sticks, lanterns and torches are among the types shown. Old chests of drawers, the bureau, the high cupboard and the old "highboy" of the early days are among the unique pieces seen in some homes.

Painted furniture, the product of the middle ages, has become popular again in some circles. Copies of Adam, Heppelwhite and Sheraton patterns are suitable for bedrooms and drawing rooms, especially in summer homes. Painted satinwood pieces are popular, but not practical as they are not durable. Lacquered work following Queen Ann designs is coming into vogue. Old bedsteads are much sought after for the modern home. Of these the four-poster of the late eighteenth century type, is considered the best. Rare Chippendale models are considered a luxury. These have slender columns, carved finials, a tester and peculiar old-fashioned curtains. Any number of old Dutch, French and English bedsteads are interesting features of collections of today and many of these are seen in the up-to-date home.

Common sense should rule in the selection and arrangement of unique furniture, whether antique or modern. Upon the proper treatment of the rooms depends the ultimate effect. If care is taken, usually good results may be obtained.

"The Home Comfortable"

Think what that would mean to the woman who has toiled long and laboriously trying to do her washing in the old fashioned way. No woman should be allowed to make herself old looking and careworn by so doing, when she can do all her washing and ironing at less than 1 1/4¢ per hour by using a—

LABOR APPEALS TO GOVERNOR

Central Union Sends Committee to Ask About Law Enforcement.

ROAST HANDED DEPUTY POOL

Declaration No Effort Made to Punish Employers Who Violate Laws Limiting Hours of Work for Women.

Castig aside the advice of C. L. Shamp and other bulwarks of organized labor, the Central Labor union in open meeting last night voted by a big majority to send a committee of two, to Lincoln to wait upon the governor and the chief deputy commissioner of labor to inform them of the nonenforcement of the labor laws in Omaha and the attitude which the appointive officers of the present administration have taken.

"Labor Commissioner Pool has absolutely refused to enforce the laws here regulating the employment of female labor, and particularly the laws which limit the employment of women to nine hours a day; he has even gone further and told the deputy factory inspectors here to put the 'soft pedal' on certain factories, and, above all, to abstain from making any political enemies," said W. A. Christman, who started the movement at the meeting at the labor temple last night.

"I suggest and demand that this organization pass a resolution empowering the president to appoint a committee of two to wait on the governor and Mr. Pool and inform them that we insist on either the enforcement of the law or the resignation of that man Pool."

"We of the Central Labor union here

know that Commissioner Pool knows that the law regarding the employment of women is being violated in Omaha, and we know further that he has refused to enforce it. Pool has contended all along to us that he has the authority to prosecute the cases, but that he has not been empowered to collect the evidence or investigate the cases.

"We know that he has been informed of specific cases of violation of the law here, and in these, he has not even taken the action to prosecute them.

"We know that right here in Omaha girls and women are working twelve and fourteen hours a day, and that Pool has been informed of the facts in the case.

"Our former experience in police court has shown that this is not the place to bring the prosecutions. The county attorney has promised that when the evidence of two competent witnesses is placed with him he will prosecute the cases. Therefore, it seems to me that the proper place for the filing of the cases is in the county court rather than the police court.

"Of course, there are many employers who would laugh at a $50 fine. The thing for us to do is to see that there are a dozen or so counts in each case, and then they would sit up and take notice.

"We should make the present officials of the state take some stand on law enforcement. When Mr. Morehead came to Omaha seeking election, he came to us as a working man, and we believed him when he said that he would enforce the laws of the state. He is the ex-officio commissioner of labor of the state of Nebraska. Pool is only his henchman, the deputy state labor commissioner. Therefore, I suggest that the committee be appointed to see both the governor and his appointee, so that that the real man responsible for this condition be apprised of the facts in the case."

Then the conservative element of the union was busy. C. L. Shamp and other labor leaders made many speeches in an effort to convince the delegates to the Central Labor union that they were wrong in taking up the battles of those who were not members of organized labor, participating in the benefits of the central organization. When the men still insisted on championing the cause of the women workers, another tack was taken, to convince the members that it was not an official action of the union, because of the fact that this was an open meeting, instead of a scheduled meeting. However, the progressive element won, and as a result, an overwhelming vote in favor of the appointment of the committee resulted.

W. A. Christman and John Pollan were appointed to carry the message of organized labor to Lincoln, and Mr. Dean was selected as alternate.

Both members of the committee insisted that they would be supplied with ample data of specific instances of violation of the law in Omaha, before they attempted to present the case to the governor and his deputy labor commissioner.

Captain of Wooden Schooner Is Drowned

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 31.—Its captain drowned, its sails blown away, its deck load gone and thirty-four days consumed in making the first 26 miles of its voyage, the four-masted wooden schooner Edward R. West put in here today for repairs.

The West started from Eureka, Cal., for Pimental, Peru, December 27. Once it got as far south as Point Reyes, just outside San Francisco bay, then a gale caught it and blew it north again and T. Stream, its captain, was washed overboard and drowned.
