

HAMMOND AND RYDER SPEAK

Des Moines Man Says the Albert Law is Best for All.

BERATES MEN STREET WALKERS

Says They Are Much Worse Than the Women and that They Should Be Prosecuted More Than the Women.

"The man street walker is more dangerous than the woman street walker and there is more of him," said John E. Hammond of Des Moines, special agent for the World's Purity federation, in an address on the "Emancipation of the White Slave," before the Commercial club yesterday.

"The man street-walker," he continued, "has his blood inflamed with passion and he makes more mistakes than does the woman street walker. I am opposed to this single standard of punishing of street walkers. It is a man problem and not a woman problem. Men nearly always run these houses in the segregated districts and the women are forced to pay heavy rent and to divide up their earnings in many ways. Investigation has shown that in Chicago, where records are kept in some of the houses, of debts and credits of the girls, practically all of the girls are kept in debt."

"The Albert law in Nebraska has been the means of emancipating the white slave to some extent, because it has at least emancipated her from the clutches of the rent graffer. This is not a radical law."

The speaker held that the doing away with the segregated district arrangements were often made between the landlord or the mistress of the place and outsiders, often even with policemen, to see that the house was kept full.

Segregation Not Necessary. "It has been argued," said Mr. Hammond, "that segregation is necessary to protect the innocent. Yet there are countless cases in which young girls from the farms and from the smaller towns have gone to the cities and have been made white slaves. Why did not segregation protect them if it protects the innocent?"

City Commissioner J. J. Ryder spoke on "Civil Betterment" following Mr. Hammond's address. He said that no decent man would quarrel with what Mr. Hammond had said about the evils of segregation and he believed there was no defense for segregation except in so far as it might under certain conditions result in the greatest good for the greatest number. "I believe that the segregated district of Omaha has been done away with for good. It is gone," said Mr. Ryder. "But I have always contended and still contend that a law should have preceded the Albert law. It should have been preceded by a law that provided some means of caring for those bruised butterflies of the street, those victims of men, these outcasts of society. As it is we arrest them and throw them into jail. Maybe they secure a bond. When they finally get out they have to stand a fine, and they are heavily indebted to some man that has provided the bond. Indebted for perhaps double the face of the bond, and when they get out every door is still closed against them and they have no recourse but to go back to the same old life. It becomes a matter of indifference to them how often they are arrested, just so they are able to make a miserable living some way."

THE SOCIETY OF THE BEE-HIVE By MELLIFICIA. Friday, Nov. 15, 1912.

TWENTY-SEVEN attractive prizes were awarded at the bridge party given at Fort Crook Wednesday evening for the benefit of the army relief fund. This is probably the largest number of prizes ever offered at a bridge party in Omaha or vicinity. There are usually about twelve prizes at the Creche Benefit; bridge parties given each spring at the Country club, and this was considered quite a large number. The prizes were usually attractive. There were handsome cut glass pieces, pictures, leather bridge sets, silver shoe buckles, silk stockings, smoking sets, jewel boxes and many other desirable articles.

The Relief society made about $90 for the charity fund. The tables were arranged in the rooms of the Officers' club, which were decorated for the occasion with wreaths of holly and other autumn leaves. The national colors draped around the coat-of-arms of the United States and of the Fourth infantry, the orchestra from the regimental band, and the gold-laced uniforms of the officers present gave the affair its distinctively military atmosphere. About sixty-five were present, including guests from Omaha, department headquarters and from Fort Omaha, in addition to the officers and ladies stationed at Fort Crook.

Mrs. Chenoweth won the first prize, choosing a beautiful vacuum coffee. Mrs. Glennan, Miss French, Mrs. Farnham, Mrs. Neubitt, Lieutenant Fulton, Mrs. Coleman and Mrs. Buttler came next in the list of prize winners, of whom there were twenty-seven.

The Army Relief society is organized to assist the families of officers and men of the army who lose their lives in the service. The following ladies of the post were active in arranging for this function: Mrs. Buttler, Mrs. Nuttman, Mrs. Noyes, Mrs. Dale, Mrs. Van Duyn, Mrs. Chenoweth, Mrs. Davis, Mrs. Kelley, Mrs. Fulton and Miss Baker.

The prizes and all the supplies for refreshments were generously donated by the leading merchants of Omaha, a courtesy which was appreciated.

Girl Mother Blames Public Dance Hall for Her Downfall

Hiding her face in shame, a beautiful 18-year-old girl on the witness stand in Judge Lee S. Estelle's district court room sobbed out a tragic story and told the judge and jury that a visit to a public dance was her first step toward ruin. The girl is the complaining witness in a quasi-criminal proceeding to compel Benjamin Teller to support her 4-month-old baby. She has been fatherless for eleven years. The defense will be based in part upon a showing that the girl's mother failed to watch over her carefully, permitted her to go to a public dance and to go out with Teller when she knew little about his character. The young girl said she met Teller at the dance, to which she went with a woman friend. Thereafter he called upon her frequently for several months.
