College students as a rule, could live on $2 a week and obtain better results, physically and mentally, than they do at present. Such is the preachment of Prof. Simon N. Patten, head of the economics department of the University of Pennsylvania, delivered in connection with the report that a Cornell student was waxing fat on a diet costing 30 cents a week.

Prof. Patten said he was not enough of an expert on food costs to say whether a man could live on 20 cents a week without seriously undermining his constitution, but he thought that so small an amount of money would not furnish the energy used up by the average man in the course of a week.

College students overcrowd their stomachs as does most everyone else, according to Dr. Patten. That he said, was not only a waste of time and money, but tends to reduce mental efficiency of the men who do it.

"I think there is a definite tendency everywhere for men and women to spend less for food and more for clothes," said Prof. Patten. "I regard this as a favorable sign, because while it is not especially desirable that persons should waste money on clothes, it is better they should do this than that they should waste it on food which injures them physically and retards them mentally.

"It seems to me the time is not far distant when universities will require every student to take a course of dieting. They should teach a student what to eat as one of their very first duties. They should have him experiment with different kinds of food so that he will know what his individual system requires. And he should learn to restrain himself from eating the things which he does not need and which merely burden his system."

BELLEVUE COLLEGE.

Miss Chase Makes Address to Students on Self-Government.
The students of Bellevue college were addressed Monday morning by Miss Carmelita Chase of Omaha on "Self Government." Miss Chase is a graduate of Bryn Mawr, and her talk was on the system of self-government which is in vogue at that institution. Prof. George Hamilton of Oxford university delivered a lecture to the students Wednesday morning following the morning chapel exercises, on the Balkan war. His lecture was made very graphic and practical by the use of a monstrous map, which extended across the front of the entire chapel room, and showed the portion of Europe concerned in the present struggle, with the territory held and owned by each of the powers, and all other details of the war.

The college council met Thursday evening in Adelphi hall and discussed "The Relation of the College to the Bellevue High School." The majority of the members were present and many practical ideas as to the value of the high school to the college and the attitude of the college students to those of the preparatory department were advanced.

FRESH AIR CRUSADE.

Experimenting with a Class in Washington School.
The fresh air crusade has broken into the public schools at Washington, D. C., and one class is undergoing observation to determine the educational value of the experiment.

About sixteen youngsters, all of them below par physically, and selected from several grades in the school, constitute the open air class.

"Though it is too soon to show any definite proof of the advantage that the pupils of the open air class have derived from this treatment, a general survey of the class is most encouraging," said Dr. Murray recently. "In preparing for this fresh air class our first step was to purchase the blankets to be wrapped around the feet and limbs of the children in such a manner that they are practically sitting in woolen bags. A cup of cocoa and a bun served to each pupil at a certain period in the morning is another protection against the cold that is naturally penetrating when one sits still for any length of time. So far these two precautions, together with regular intervals of physical exercise, are the only advantages we have been able to provide for the children."

Friday evening, December 13, "Another Adam," a miniature comic opera in two acts, book and music by Floyd K. Russell of Wabash college, was produced under the direction of Messrs. Roberts and Holcomb, by the glee and dramatic clubs. A large audience of friends and cadets showed by their generous applause that they considered the clever band of players were capable of interpreting the equally clever work of Mr. Russell. The leading parts were very nicely handled by Clinton Burnett as Evelyn and Freeman Penney as Adam. They were assisted greatly by the other members and chorus. The female parts were taken by Jane and the "chorus girls" would do justice to a professional company.

Friday afternoon Major Frisbie and Colonel Hayward took the cadets on a hike to a farm house a couple of miles away where they cooked lunch, returning about 5 o'clock.

Power, Money and Fame, by Many Are Worshipped as Idols.
At the Third Presbyterian church yesterday morning Rev. T. T. Koopman, late of Milwaukee, spoke to a good sized congregation. Rev. Mr. Koopman's topic was earnest and convincing, the subject being "The Kingdom of Heaven." He contended that too many people worship idols such as power, money and fame to the extent of partially or wholly neglecting religion. He deplored forcing men to do good, when the doing of good came mechanically and not from any true wish of the doer's heart.

"Through prayer and instruction in the right way the kingdom of God will be made manifest, and through this method voluntary and true good will be enacted to make the foundation of the heavenly city firm and strong," said the speaker. He urged people to seek the heavenly kingdom first, and then the world, with its joys and sorrows would cease to have its hold upon them. Rev. Mr. Koopman, in the course of his sermon remarked about the beautiful weather, designating it as another of God's wondrous blessings.
