

WILL MOVE BROWNELL HALL

Trustees of School Accept Offer of Site in Fairacres.

WILL ERECT 250,000 BUILDING

Plans of Proposed Building Presented and Will Be Shown to the Public Next Monday Noon.

Brownell Hall, the Nebraska school for girls that has been maintained on South Tenth street for fifty years, is to move. It is to go to Fairacres, just west of the city limits, and is to be located upon a ten-acre tract donated by C. C. and J. E. George of the real estate firm of George & Co. This much was decided at the meeting of the board of trustees held yesterday afternoon.

Resides the trustees, both Bishop Williams and Bishop Beecher of Kearney were in attendance. They advocated the erection of a new building and assured the trustees that the people of Nebraska, who have supported Brownell Hall for the last fifty years, are now ready and willing to take hold and do more than ever before in behalf of the school.

Bishop Beecher added enthusiasm to the meeting by assuring the trustees that the people of the western part of the state look upon Brownell Hall as one of the leading and substantial schools of the country and that in the future they are going to patronize it to a much greater extent than in the past.

Plans Are Shown. During the meeting the committee on plans and scope was called in and with the members came Architect Prinz, who had prepared preliminary plans. These were examined and at the noon luncheon at the University club Monday noon, where a large number of the alumni members of Brownell Hall will be present, they will be shown to the public.

The plans contemplate a building, or rather three buildings, all under one roof and costing in the aggregate $250,000. The buildings, as contemplated by the plans, will consist of a main or central structure, three stories high, with a high basement. On either side there will be wings, two stories, and a basement. The buildings are to be of pressed brick construction, fireproof and modern in every particular, somewhat ornamental. The central structure is to be used as an administration building, with dormitories on the upper floors. The wings will be for class and recitation rooms, gymnasium, dining halls and dormitories.

Out of respect to the memory of the Episcopal bishops of Nebraska, who have had so much to do with making Brownell a success, the buildings are to be named for them. The central structure will be known as the Talbot house, one of the wings the Clarkson and the other the Worthington house.

To Start This Year. The provision of the gift of land by the Messrs. George provide that, if accepted, the buildings shall be commenced this year and be completed and ready for occupancy not later than October, 1916.

Feeling that the time is short, the trustees will inaugurate a campaign and begin the work of raising funds. Already numerous subscriptions have been promised, though no canvass has been made. The trustees are of the opinion that little difficulty will be experienced in raising the necessary money required to erect, complete and equip the buildings.

The site has been examined and has been pronounced ideal. It lies well to the north of Fairacres and slopes gently to the south.

At the meeting of the trustees, Miss Johnson, principal of Brownell Hall, was present and submitted her report as to the condition of the school. This report showed an increased attendance, splendid work done by the pupils and the finances in excellent shape.

Gaston was discharged, in spite of the fact that an inner automobile tire, two pairs of automobile glasses and other paraphernalia unusual for a side-door Pullman traveler were found in his possession.

Sister Ship of the One Sunken Always Said the Unluckier

Maritime superstition about "lucky" and "unlucky" vessels is overturned by the disastrous wreck of the Empress of Ireland.

According to Joseph Keenan, manager of the Henshaw, who made the trip abroad in 1907 on the Empress of Britain, sister ship of the one just sunk, the Britain had always been considered unlucky since its first voyage, whereas the Ireland, now at the bottom of the sea, had enjoyed the reputation of being the lucky vessel of the two.

Regular and persistent good fortune had always followed the Ireland on its voyages, Keenan says. On the other hand, the Britain, which is still in navigation, had frequently had ill omens attend its sailings. On its maiden voyage, he says, it had a slight mishap, on its thirteenth voyage propeller trouble had hindered it, and only a year ago it had collided with a coal barge. Sailors, therefore, considered the Britain unlucky, while the Ireland, which now has had the worst of fates, always bore a reputation of good fortune.
