

CATHOLICS CELEBRATE DAY

Youngsters of Parochial Schools Give Memorial Program.

AUDITORIUM IS WELL FILLED

Several Thousand Congregate for Patriotic Observance Under Auspices of the Knights of Columbus.

Between 2,500 and 3,000 enthusiastic Catholic youngsters of the eighteen parochial schools of Omaha, South Omaha and Benson, yelling and waving a sea of flags until their little throats and arms were tired, filled the main floor of the Auditorium at their third annual Memorial day observance.

Their patriotism was so spontaneous that the slightest excuse was sufficient to arouse a demonstration of cheer and flag waving. When Rev. P. A. Flanagan of Holy Angels' parish rose to offer the invocation and Lord's prayer the youngsters applauded vigorously and soon cheered when he sat down.

Realizing that the kiddies meant all right, but that some simply did not understand the idea of the exercises, Joan A. Bennett, master of ceremonies, explained that they were there, not to celebrate, but to honor and respect the heroes to whose memory the day was dedicated.

Through practically all those attending were Catholics, including children, parents, Knights of Columbus, priests, nuns, sisters and churchmen.

Lincoln's famous Gettysburg address was delivered by Paul C. Harrington, rator and member of the graduating class of the Creighton University College of Arts.

His tribute to heroes of former wars and to the bluejackets and marines who were killed at Vera Cruz brought forth great applause.

William F. Gurley made the memorial address. He said that it was a splendid confirmation of the innate vigor and patriotic manhood of the American people that they could find time to honor the brave heroes of the past in this age of stocks, bonds, bargains, sales and typing machines.

His tribute to heroes of former wars and to the bluejackets and marines who were killed at Vera Cruz brought forth great applause.

There is also a great opportunity for the girl, he continued. "The influence of woman in the home is greater than that of the ballot."

Wilson is Praised. "As an example of the modern peaceful patriot, he praised President Wilson. No greater patriotism was ever displayed on a battlefield," he said, "than that shown by the president in his efforts to avert war with Mexico."

Led by the priests of the various parishes the children marched or rode in chartered street cars to the Auditorium, from their schools. All carried American flags and the pennants and banners of their school.

by thousands of people going on the street cars, in automobiles and on foot. Foliage is beautiful.

The cemetery never looked better, the trees and flowers having been freshened by the recent rains and everywhere the foliage was at its best.

Hardships of the Soldiers. The memorial address by Rev. H. P. Cornish of South Omaha dealt with the great debt the country owes its soldiers, going into somewhat extended details over the privations they were called upon to endure in the field.

There is only one human feeling stronger than a boy's desire to be a man, and that is a man's desire to be a boy again.

The man knows he got cheated horribly when he swapped boyhood for manhood.

By losing a great deal that he should have and gaining a few very desirable things a boy becomes a man.

If you want a good, earnest, lifelong enemy, offend a boy about 9 years old needlessly.

It takes a whole lot of a man to apologize to a boy when he finds he has done the lad an injustice.

The modern boy, in most instances, is the son of a man who knew nothing about automobiles when he was a boy.

ARKANSAS HILL PREACHERS Exponents of Scripture Strangely Unlike Their Brethren of the Cities.

The preacher of the hills works. His sermons are not inspired in some well-appointed library on theology, but behind the plow handles with the lines around his neck, urging old Beck down the corn or cotton rows, or to the music of resounding blows of his axe, as he splits his 40 rails a day to fence the new clearing.

He asks for little for his work and gets less. He preaches for the good that he can do and for the glory of God. He is a Christian martyr.

He is a passing shadow in mountain history, the younger element not being drawn to follow his footsteps on account of the meager competence, or none, that it promises.

It promises, invariably we find him living high up on some ridge or plateau, cultivating, with the help of his family, a little hill farm, from which his real living comes.

He never lives in the bottom; thoughts come to him better nearer the azure heavens. He stands out strong for the old-time religion.

The cults and the tenets and the new-fangled interpretation of the Bible do not appeal to him.

He preaches the doctrine of the Bible unadulterated. Hell is a place of everlasting perdition and heaven a celestial palace.

He doesn't only preach it, but believes it clear down to the toes of his high top boots.

He preaches it with such a clear understanding that he makes his congregations believe it, and they are strong in the faith.

LIMITS OF HUMAN VISION

Interesting and Curious Data on the Distinctness of Perception.

Men of science have collected interesting and curious data with reference to the distinctness of perception in eyesight and as to its limitations comparing other senses with the sense of vision and human eyesight with the eyesight of insects.

In many cases the drift of the inquiry has been simply to ascertain how near together one can place two objects and still perceive them distinctly as two.

It has been shown that each lens reflects but a small portion of the image looked at, and that it requires the combined action of the 4,000 lenses of the eye to produce the same effect as that seen by the one human eye.

Scientists who have devoted considerable attention to the investigation of compound eyes have formed no opinion that would lead to the conclusion that their power of vision with respect to small objects exceeds that of the simple eyes of the higher animals.

The images of objects formed in the separate lenses composing the compound eye are proportionally small, and the question whether insects can see smaller objects than animals furnished with single eyes is not a question of optics, but of the sensitiveness of the optic nerve and, consequently, a matter of mere conjecture.—Washington Star.

A Serious Fault. "It's nice of you to let me see your proofs, Mr. Lavender. Which do I consider the best? That's rather difficult there isn't one here that really does you justice—photographic justice, I mean."

"Thank you, Miss Lydia, I would esteem it a great favor if you could intimate a preference."

"Really, I couldn't, Mr. Lavender. Each proof shows the prevailing fault."

"Any what fault is that, Miss Lydia?"

"They are all too lifelike."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

QUICK SELLING OF HARDWARE

Number of Daily Sales at Burnett Hardware Co.'s Closing Out Event Is Unbelievably Large.

This Going - One - of - Business Selling Affords Unending Opportunities for Mechanic and Housewife.

"My, what DO people do with all that hardware?"

"Say, are the other hardware houses selling ANYTHING at all?"

"Well, I don't blame people for buying, with prices as low as those!"

Stand around the store of the Burnett Hardware Co., at 1612 Harney St., for awhile, and you, too, will voice your astonishment when you see the almost unbelievably large number of hardware items sold in a few moments.

Still, a gigantic business of this sort is no surprise, for "Burnett" has heralded far and wide that he intends going out of business and that his entire stock of hardware will be offered at typical "Close Out" prices. It does not take long to imagine a need for something or other when you know you are going to buy it at a price far lower than usual.

This "Going Out of Business" Sale of the Burnett Hardware Co. includes hundreds of items that are used daily by Carpenters, Mechanics, Contractors, Gardeners, etc., tools by the thousands; supplies by the ton. And when it comes to household hardware equipment this sale of Burnett's opens up a wonderful array of opportunities. A woman may come here and buy cutlery, aluminum wares, electric devices, alarm clocks, flash lights, toy wagons, percolators, thermos bottles, lawn mowers, hose, etc., at prices FAR lower than she has ever before seen quoted, simply because Burnett is strong in his desire to disengage himself from the hardware business.

So ask yourself: "Do I need hardware?" Then answer yourself, and say: "Well, if I do need hardware I may as well go see how cheap that fellow Burnett is offering his."

It's bona fide! Burnett Hardware Co. is really selling EVERY one of its thousands of hardware items at Going-Out-of-Business Prices at 1612 Harney St.—Advertisement.
