Plan on Foot to Throw Q Street Special Taxes on City.

HIGH OFFICIAL BACKS MOVE

City Prosecutor Leigh Declares He Will Prepare Ordinance to Prohibit People Letting Chickens Run at Large.

How the taxes of South Omaha run up and why, is the substance of a little story being teld about the city just at present in connection with the alleged activities of a high city official to have the special improvement taxes beaten and thrown on the city at large. A promenent uptown attorney is said to have been consulted on the matter.

As the story goes it is said to affect Q street. The packing houses are to bear their share of the burden without any relief, it is understood. They are willing to pay for tife pavement, but the move is said to contemplate placing the burden of the other property owners on the city at

It is understood that the attorney in question was asked as to the possibility of throwing out the improvement taxes, which means that through some technicallty the abutting property owners get relieved of paying for their improvements and the burden falls on the city at large, including the little property owners in the back streets where the mud is nice and soft. This has been worked by a certain class of men in South Omaha for years. It is understood that the attorney admitted that he could knock the tax in question out, but expressed surprise that the high official should want to do such a thing. The official is reported to have remarked: "Well, I want to get rid of that load as well as anyone else." Keep Chickens at Home.

Chickens in South Omaha will be restrained of their liberty if City Prosecutor E. R. Leigh has his way. City Prosecutor Leigh says that the police court is encumbered with neighbors complaining against neighbors because of the depredations of Madam Hen. Judge Callagan says his hours of rest and philosophib musing are disturbed by the tinkle of the telephone bell started into action by trate gardeners who enter protests against the invasion of the closes by a flock of chickens.

City Prosecutor Leigh announced that he would draw an ordinance making it a misdemeanor for people to allow their chickens to run at large in South Omaha. Omaha is said to have such an ordinance and as a result the officials and police report that there is lacking the usual neigh-
