

MIGRATORY BIRD LAW GOOD

Two Decisions, Diametrically Opposite, Put Validity to High Court.

WILL BE STRICTLY ENFORCED

Dr. William T. Hornaday Writes an Open Letter to the Public Setting Forth Plans of Bird Protection.

William T. Hornaday of New York, the well known ornithologist and conservator of the National museum, has addressed the public in an open letter concerning the recent decision of a judge of the United States court in Arkansas holding the federal game law to be unconstitutional. The case was brought at the instance of some Kansas City shooters, who resented having spring shooting interfered with. Dr. Hornaday says: "To the Press and the Public at Large: In a short time the enemies of the migratory bird law will, with great glee, announce once more that the law is unconstitutional. This time the statement will have a little more to rest upon than the soap-box decisions of learned spring-shooters of wild fowl who never even saw the national constitution. "In the wilds of eastern Arkansas, at Jonesboro, on May 27, in the United States court, the case of the United States against Harvey C. Schauer, for a violation of the federal migratory bird law, was heard by Judge Jacob Trierber, who decided that the law is unconstitutional. Of course the United States will carry the case up until it finally reaches the United States supreme court, where, with extra expedition, a decision may be expected in about eighteen months. "The first decision on the status of the migratory law was that rendered in South Dakota, on April 18, 1914, by Judge J. D. Elliott of the federal court, who decided, in the case of A. M. Shaw, that the law is constitutional. Mr. Shaw pleaded guilty and was fined $100, which was paid.

"The first case in which the law was held to be unconstitutional was that of the United States against Harvey C. Schauer, for a violation of the federal migratory bird law, which was heard by Judge Jacob Trierber, who decided that the law is unconstitutional. Of course the United States will carry the case up until it finally reaches the United States supreme court, where, with extra expedition, a decision may be expected in about eighteen months. "The first decision on the status of the migratory law was that rendered in South Dakota, on April 18, 1914, by Judge J. D. Elliott of the federal court, who decided, in the case of A. M. Shaw, that the law is constitutional. Mr. Shaw pleaded guilty and was fined $100, which was paid.

"Inasmuch as a test case was necessary, we are very glad that the name of no real game-protecting state is in any way connected with it. The Arkansas case soon will rival the fame of the 'Arkansas Traveler,' and the name of Schauer will go thundering down the ages as the inheritance of the children of the man who permitted himself to be used in a test case that was made in 1914 to destroy the only law that was able to save the migratory birds of North America from annihilation.

"The friends of birds need feel no alarm over this incident, nor anything more serious than mild interest. Unless the United States supreme court deliberately elects to pull down a full score of laws that the representatives of the American people have enacted in connection with the great migratory bird law, the birds will stand. The side of the people and the birds will be taken care of, if need be, by a hundred able lawyers, who are fully convinced that the law is constitutional, and that its stability can be demonstrated to the satisfaction of any open and logical legal mind.

"In addition to the scores of more of New York and Washington lawyers who have offered their services to this cause, some of whom already have prepared extended briefs, Frederic B. Couderc, one of the most distinguished members of the American bar, has volunteered his services on the side of the birds—an offer which undoubtedly will be accepted. The United States Department of Justice, headed by Attorney General McKeynolds, can confidently be trusted to conduct the people's fight for the birds with all the legal acumen and resources of that department, and the organized spring shooters of Kansas City now will have an opportunity to contribute money in aid of their cause and Mr. Schauer.

"Spring Shooters Will Shoot. "Of course the enemies of the law will laugh first, and claim the decision in advance. The Kansas City spring-shooters will make a great effort to rush the supreme court and secure a decision in their favor in time to give them their beloved spring-shooting privileges next January; for dear to the heart of the spring-shooter of 1914 is the privilege of slaughtering egg-laden ducks and geese in March, April and May. For that they are willing to rob the farmers and forest owners of America of the only law that ever can or ever will adequately protect their best allies—the insectivorous birds. It is this feature of Kansas City selfishness that is so exasperating, and we may well believe that the membership of the Interstate Spring-shooters Protective association contains not one farmer, fruit grower or forester.

"WILLIAM T. HORNADAY." "New York, June 1, 1914."

French and a full corps of officers. Past masters will also attend the meeting. Special arrangements have been made by the masters of the Omaha lodges, to assist the delegates in finding suitable hotel accommodations. A reception committee of fifty local Masons has been appointed, headed by these members of the grand lodge's committee on visiting brethren: Edward S. Thompson, Harry P. Van Arsdale, George R. Porter, Thomas Johnson and Richard C. Jordan.
