HOWARD AND SIXTEENTH STREETS
Suffs Try to Blow Up Coronation Chair in Westminster Abbey

LONDON, June 11.—An attempt to blow up the coronation chair which has been in Westminster Abbey since 1296 was made this evening. The outrage is attributed by the authorities to militant suffragettes.

The chair, generally called "Edwards' chair," out of respect to Edward the Confessor, near whose shrine it stands, was made by order of King Edward, to hold the coronation stone or "Stone of Scone," on which the ancient Scottish kings used to sit when they were crowned. It was captured by Edward I from the Scots.

The damage caused by the bomb today's explosion was slight. The explosive had been placed beneath it, but its effects seemed not to reach the chair itself, which is of solid oak, covered with gilding and ornamental work.

The history of the stone so far as it is known goes back to the year 843, when it was placed in the Abbey of Scone, Perthshire, by King Kenneth. It is not known whence it originally came, but a legend connected with it says it is the identical stone upon which the Biblical patriarch, Jacob, laid his head when he had the vision of the angels descending the ladder that reached to heaven.

The police quickly took possession of the abbey after the outrage. The explosion occurred while Reginald McKenna was talking on the suffrage question in the House of Commons. The detonation was plainly heard in the Parliament house and members of the commons and the peers flocked out into Parliament square to ascertain what had happened.

Two young women who were in the abbey at the time, were arrested and subsequently removed in a taxicab to a police station.

The actual damage to the framework of the coronation chair appears to be confined to the blowing off of one of the pinnacles at the top of the back. The bomb appears to have been brought into the abbey in a bag which was placed partly beneath the seat of the chair.

STATE MAKING BY INTENTION

knowledge and administrative efficiency because of the great new social tasks to be performed and the heavy financial burdens that those new things involve. But in our state governments we have not yet seen through clear light our dire needs and our unrivaled opportunities.

"The time has come for electing legislatures—and in my opinion also every high officer of the state—for reasons that relate to the business of the state itself and to no other consideration."
"If I were asked, in regard to many of our states, what is their most hopeful achievement thus far, and what agency can they best use to work out a program of sound and scientific state-building, and to keep that program alive and active—without haste, without rest—as the German motto phrase it—I should point with pleasure and with pride to the state universities.

Can Make Different State.
"By definite planning and intention, you can make a wholly different state out of this commonwealth of Nebraska from the state that would be yours if things were left in the main to private initiative—supplemented by the strictly localized activities of your cities, and by the exploiting operations of business corporations. These local and private forms of initiative will indeed produce results, in the blazing light of opportunity that the twentieth century offers. But those results, in my opinion, will produce sharp and unfortunate contrasts or conditions if they are not greatly modified and wholly dominated by an initiative coming from the sovereign state itself, having far-reaching objects, based upon the definite intention to conserve the welfare of all the people; to protect the natural resources of soil and stream and forest; and to bring about those modifications of nature and ordinary life that lend charm and give an air of happiness and content to the best-favored and best-managed localities of our country, or of the world."

FOUR KILLED IN AUTO SMASH ON LANE CUT-OFF

"Vivian, our only child, was to have been married July 15," Mr. Ash said, "and she was a saddle maker employed in East Omaha, said, dully, "It seemed to us only yesterday that she was a babe in short dresses, playing at our feet. We were heart heavy when she became engaged; it seemed so hard to lose our daughter; if marriage and happiness to her could be called losing her. But now she's dead and we'll never even see her again. Poor little baby. She was all we had in the world. Mother and I are getting old now. When Vivian told us she was in love, we consoled ourselves by thinking of the happiness her happiness would bring in our old age." Mr. Ash sighed, and for a moment could talk no more.

Krug Lived Here.

Young Krug had been living at the home of his prospective father-in-law since his engagement. Surviving him is a brother and sister, Mrs. Brown of Washington, D. C., and Edmund V. Krug of St. Louis.

The home of Carl Bair, 1699 Lathrop, was a duplicate of the one on Manderson street. Miss Ida May Bair, the only child now left to her widowed mother, told in the same, dull, vacant way how her brother, just before taking the unfortunate victims for a pleasure ride, had given her a ride. She returned at about 3 o'clock and Carl told her he intended to put the car up because there was something wrong with the lights. He was a good son and brother and contributed regularly to the support of the family.

Husband Lived at Blair.

Mrs. Thompson was married to Kenneth Thompson, manager of a general store at Blair, last winter. She was formerly Miss Maud Brainerd of Chadron. A sister, Mrs. James Russell, 210 Harrison street, Council Bluffs, gave the Bair photograph. Her husband arrived in Omaha at noon. She had been living at 215 South Twentieth street, and her husband was with her only last Sunday.

CHISAM LOOKS FOR BIG CROP FROM HIS RANCH

Assistant General Freight Agent Chisam of the Great Western, who owns and runs a California walnut ranch on the side, is delighted with the word that comes to him. Off twenty acres of bearing walnut trees last year he cleaned up an even $5,000, and his advice is that this year the prospects are better than ever before for a bumper crop.
