ON HOME TRADE EXCURSION

Three Hundred Omaha Business Men Go Out Over Missouri Pacific.

SEE MANUFACTURING PLANTS

Visitors on the Trip Wonder at the Magnitude of the Industries and Watch Process of Manufacture.

A home trade excursion by rail was conducted in Omaha yesterday afternoon, and from the fact that 300 men participated, it was considered by all to be a success. The trip was over the Belt Line of the Missouri Pacific, and was made on a special train in charge of General Superintendent D. Bernardi, and touched many important manufacturing plants, all located on the double track road that extends from Sprague street on the north to South Omaha on the south, including the city on the west and fifteen miles in length.

"And who would have thought we had all this in Omaha?" was a frequent remark heard during the course of the excursion as the Omaha business men gazed in wonder at the wonders and system they saw in the various manufacturing plants. "And to think that we have lived here so long and did not know we had such manufacturing establishments in toe city," was remarked by many.

The National Box company plant was the first place visited. Here at once many of the visitors opened their eyes for many had never seen a large band saw at work eating through timbers like a string through mud.

The Nebraska Stone company was next on the list. "And who would have thought they could saw stone?" was an exclamation heard on every hand, when the amazed visitors stood before the great set of a dozen saws that plowed their way through slab boulders of granite, weighing a dozen tons. "These who would have thought a buzz saw would saw stone?" was another exclamation, for there was a buzz saw no less than six feet in diameter, cutting its way through a slab of granite.

At Steel Company Plant. The Omaha Structural Steel company plant was next on the tour. Here were acres of structural steel for the big orders from Omaha and the surrounding country. Here, too, were the big circular cutting bars of steel with as little effort as a knife would cut cheese.

Then came the Weir Planing mill, where the excursionists saw the great timbers planed down, worked over, and smoothed. Also here a number of handsome girls served lemonade.

Then the Sunderland Brothers Marble works were visited and ice cold punch and cigars were served. Here the crowd witnessed the cutting down by machinery of great blocks of marble. They witnessed the polishing of these blocks, saw the finished product ready for the market.

At the Ideal Cement Stone company plant the visitors saw the cement stone made, passed through the drying rooms where the temperature was some fifty degrees hotter than the midsummer day, and saw the steam-cured blocks ready for the building.

More Punch for the Thirsty. At Uncle Sam's Health Food factory, punch was served again, by handsome women, and again the thirsty crowd partook. They slipped in among the machinery and grabbed off handfuls of the breakfast food hot off the rollers and relished it without cream or sugar.

At the T. F. Stroud Wagon Manufacturing company plant there was much to see in the working of the turning lathes. There was much to see in the course of preparing the various pieces to complete the heavy wagons.

The excursion passed on to the Blau Gas company plant, where they saw the process of manufacturing this product that is said to possess more heat units than water gas.

Then the Storz brewery was reached, where a table thirty feet long had been set with a dainty lunch. Beer was served by way of liquid refreshments. The crowd had grown hungry by this time as it was nearing 6 o'clock. The members plowed into the liver sausage, the summer sausage, the Pennsylvania sausage, the rye bread, the onions, cheese, olives and pickles.

At the Updike Milling company plant the visitors were shown through the mills, where annually millions of bushels of Nebraska wheat is converted into flour to furnish bread for the world.

HOFF GIVES HIS MONEY TO SAN DIEGO EXPOSITION

Representative Sam Hoff, who has received two letters from Lieutenant Governor E. R. McElvick, asking a $1 bill for a Nebraska building at the San Francisco exposition, has refused the request.

"In order to show that it isn't because I value the money too highly," he said, "I am going to give $2 to the San Diego exposition. It was San Diego which first conceived the idea of holding the exposition and San Francisco took it away from the original Panama canal boosters."

AFFAIRS AT SOUTH OMAHA

Actual Work Under Way on the L Street Extension.

DOUBLE TRACK ALL THE WAY

Numerous Democrats Are After the Scalp of Police Judge Callahan and Republican Likely to Land.

Actual work on the street car extension from Thirty-fifth and L streets to Forty-fourth and L was begun yesterday morning. A permit was obtained yesterday from the office of City Engineer Herman Deal. The extension will comprise a double track and will open one of the best developed tracts to traffic.

The extension of the street car lines west along L street to the city limits means a big thing for the property owners of that section. It means also a triumph for the men who have worked for a number of years with this in view. Among the promoters of the extension are H. M. Christie, G. H. Brewer, H. C. Murphy and P. Lavelle.

A move is now on foot to provide street car facilities from L street south along Thirty-sixth to the county line.

After Callahan's Scalp. Friends of the democratic police judge are beginning to realize that he is slated for the discard appears from the anxious struggle to keep any strong republican from filing and increasing the number of democratic candidates. The latest effort is to force Jim Jones, meat inspector, into the race. This has two purposes—one to keep a strong republican out and the other to pry Jones away from his job as meat inspector, which is wanted badly by a strong democrat and friend of the mayor.

It is now conceded generally that if Charles Alstad decides to get into the race he will win out with the support of many democrats who are after him to file. Alstad is a friend of the poor men and the laborers of South Omaha, regardless of nationality.

Hunt for McIntyre. Louis McIntyre, 45 years of age, a well-known citizen of Wynot, Neb., has disappeared from the home of his mother in South Omaha, where he was visiting. Fears for his safety are entertained as he had a large sum of money on his person when last seen.

McIntyre came to South Omaha two weeks ago yesterday to visit his mother, who is a housekeeper in the southern part of the city. He called at her place of residence and inquired if she needed money. He offered her a check for $75, which she refused. He is also said to have had a large sum of cash money with him.

He left his mother to go to a restaurant at Twenty-fourth and Q streets to get his suitcase. He has never returned and no trace of him remains. The police have been called into the case.

PETTY THIEVES RAID CHURCH

Sanctuaries in New York City Are Robbed of $50,000 Worth of Property Yearly.

Every once in a while there is reported to the police by church pastors or officials the theft of church property amounting to a good round sum. These are the cases in which the burglars steal communion vessels or rob the poor boxes. These robberies are reported because of their magnitude. But there are hundreds of thefts of smaller caliber that the church people do not bother telling the police about unless they become frequent beyond endurance.

The sexton of an upper Broadway church estimates that the sums of money and articles stolen from churches in the course of a year in New York amount to at least $60,000. Scidom if ever is any of the property recovered. In many cases the thief is known, or suspected, but nothing is done. The church people do not care for the scandal, and especially when no money or material could be recovered it is generally deemed best to drop the whole affair.

A number of churches gave up the practice of placing books in pews because of the wholesale purloinings by church thieves in particular districts. In some of the Episcopal churches the thieves make a specialty of grabbing the little combination prayer book and hymnal, which many churchgoers possess in expensive forms. In some cases the holders of certain pews leave their books in the racks at morning service and if they fail to attend at evening the church thief very often sits in the pew and cleans the rack.

The expert thief comes arrayed in white tie and puts an arm around the shoulder of the brother he meets in the vestibule; asks for another brother by name and then wants to know where to put his things. This is often done before service begins. He is directed where to place his hat and coat. He bustles back and forth bowing to arrivals whether he knows them or not. He runs no risk in this because churchgoers think it but right to return a warm greeting to those who greet them in their church. After a while the thief believes

Unity in Church Work in Korea, Says Dr. McCune

Dr. George S. McCune, the noted missionary of Syen Chun, Korea, told his hearers at the Omaha Summer School of Missions last night that so closely together are the Protestant denominations working in Korea that many converts could not tell to which they belonged. Here was a concrete case:

"One of the prisoners held before a Japanese judge in the recent turmoil in Korea—the persecution—was asked by the judge what church he belonged to. 'The Jesus church,' replied the man. 'Yes, but to which, Baptist, Methodist, Presbyterian, Congregationalist, or which,' persisted the judge, who understood. The poor Korean could not tell. He had been a Presbyterian for nine years and didn't know it.

"It's unity out there with us," declared Dr. McCune.

And in thirty years Korea has yielded 80,000 native members of these churches. Through her of the Korean Mission school, around which centered the persecution growing out of the alleged attempt on Terachi, former Japanese governor-general, Dr. McCune has only kind words to say of Japan and its people, who, however, he wishes to see much changed.

Rev. Henry Willard Lampe, son of Dr. J. J. Lampe of Omaha, is associated with Dr. McCune at Syen Chun and carrying on the work in his absence. Dr. and Mrs. McCune were guests at the university last evening of the Presbyterian Young Women's Guilds of Omaha, which support his sister, Miss Catherine McCune, also a missionary, in Korea.

They stopped while in Omaha with Mr. and Mrs. James B. Wootan, old college friends.

TAKES CORN CURE WHILE TRYING TO END HIS LIFE

"Ah done been sick of this heah old life," 35-year-old Amos Leach, colored, told his companions Thursday night and after leaving them and getting home drank a bottle of the first thing he came across that looked like poison. The bottle contained a patent corn cure which would have resulted fatally but for the timely arrival of police surgeons. The boy lives with his parents at 1915 North Twenty-first street.

that he will have to hurry back to his house for a church extension report that he has forgotten or some similar reason, if it's necessary to give any to an inquisitive looking bystander. Then he goes to the anteroom and picks the pockets of every coat there. If there are soft hats there he crowds two or three of them into his pockets of the best overcoat he can find, for that's the one he will wear out, together with the best hat, leaving his old possessions behind.—New York Sun.
