MISS DAPHNE PETERS, one of the newest devotees to the golf game, won the trophy at the Women's turney at the Country club Thursday afternoon. The prize was a beautiful silver vase presented by Miss Peters' father, M. C. Peters, president of the Country club. It was a handicap match; the three most expert players of the club, Mrs. E. H. Sprague, Mrs. J. T. Stewart 2d and Mrs. W. T. Burns played scratch plus five, while all of the other players, all of whom have started the game more recently, were given handicaps.

Miss Peters' net score was 85; she played the eighteen holes in 111, with a handicap of 25, which is a remarkably good score for a beginner. Miss Peters has been playing golf only two months, and her teachers prophesy she will be one of the coming players.

The next good score was turned in by Miss Mary Burkle, another new player; her net score was 93; Miss Mildred Butler came next, with 95; Miss Louise Dinning, 97; Mrs. Harold Pritchett, 98; Miss Elizabeth Davis, 99; Mrs. Ben Cotton, 105; Mrs. Charles T. Kountze, 111, and the three scratch players, Mrs. Sprague, 94; Mrs. J. T. Stewart, 94, and Mrs. W. T. Burns, 101.

Another tournament for the women gold players will be given next month at the club.

ANNA SHAW DENIES STORY

Declares Interview at Philadelphia on Matrimony is Wrong.

CRITICIZED SOME FEATURES

Thinks Sacrament All Right, but Manner of Application is Not Exactly Up to the Needs of Present Day.

Dr. Anna Howard Shaw brands the Philadelphia story, giving her views on matrimony as having outlived its usefulness as being absolutely without foundation, according to information received by the local suffrage association.

On the contrary Mrs. Shaw is said to believe steadfastly in the marriage ceremony, but the manner in which it is conducted is the thing that bothers her and gives her occasion for criticism.

She regards the sacrament as a sacred contract and one that is often abused because, says she, it is too many times based upon a financial, social or other standard instead of the only successful one of affection. Her message in part follows:

"The purported interview I photographed from Philadelphia, that I stated that the marriage ceremony had outlived its usefulness and should be relegated to oblivion, is absolutely without foundation. I had no such interview with any reporter; nor did I express my views on the subject of marriage to any reporter since my return from Europe until after these garbled statements appeared in public.

Objects to Some Features.
"A long time since, when the question of leaving the word 'obey' out of the marriage ceremony was under discussion, I did make the statement that there were many features of the present church marriage ceremony which should be obliterated, and mentioned the word 'obey' which I considered to be essentially immoral, because for any human being to pledge for a series of years in advance to obey any other human being, without knowing what will be demanded of her, is essentially immoral.

"I also spoke of the part in which the woman is given away as being antiquated and belonging to the time when the woman was not recognized as a distinct human entity, but as belonging to the male members of the family. "These two points in the marriage ceremony, I think, are out of place at the present time, and I so stated. But so far from stating that the marriage ceremony was out of place, my whole ideal of marriage is so high that I feel these changes should be made, because I

Fashion Hint

By LA RACONTREUSE.

The habille tailored suits are distinctly novel in their outlines. This model made of sailor blue garbardin is by Parry.

The short cassaque is rather loose, making two straight revers in front and gathered at the shoulder in a wide shoulder tab fastened in front by a button.

The vest of Roman striped satin is essentially of the spring of 1914, and is much more daring in color than those of 1913.
