Women of United Travelers Put On Ritualistic Work

Omaha is taking the lead in the matter of secret ritualistic work by women's auxiliaries of the United Commercial Travelers. Dramatic Holdup Takes Place Mile East of Ashland

A genuine moving picture holdup took place at 7:30 o'clock Sunday night about one mile east of Ashland, Neb., when three heavily armed men stopped John Phillips of Ashland and demanded that he give them his valuables. The victim was complying as Charles W. Caringello, a South American cowpuncher and adventurer, was riding by on his pony. The hero naturally had a gun with him and used it, putting the three bandits to route and wounding one in the course of his firing. Bullets were passing fast and thick, according to Tony Guido, 232 Hickory street, who, with a party of friends, happened to be within eyesight of the busy scene. Caringello's escape is described as being a narrow one, for the bandits emptied their guns at him before riding away. All were mounted on horses and Phillips was supposed to have a large sum of money on his person.

"If the golden rule won't work, we'll substitute the iron arm of the law," declared Police Magistrate Foster, as he issued bench warrants for the arrest of three men who failed to appear in court for running autos with the muffler cut out. Officer Wheeler served "golden rule" warrants on C. P. Jewell, 523 North Fortieth; Dr. W. E. Mogan, Henshaw hotel, and M. B. Bramon, 49 North Eighteenth street, for "cannonding" past hospitals. They all failed to show up.

RAIN ALL OVER THE STATE

May Injure Some of the Wheat Cut and Not Shocked.

GREAT HELP TO THE CORN

Fall is from a Drizzle to Two Inches in Some Places—Damage is More Than Offset by the Good Done.

While it is contended by grain men and others that rain is not needed at this time, it is practically general all over Nebraska, the precipitation ranging from a slow drizzle to a regular downpour. Through the central portion of the state it has been much heavier than in either the east or west. Throughout the central portion of Nebraska the rain began to fall Monday evening and continued all night, according to the reports coming to the railroad offices here. All the way from O'Neill on the north to Stremberg on the south and down into Kansas, there was from one-half to three-fourths of an inch, it falling at Harvard, Loup City, St. Paul, Grand Island, Wood River, Kearney, Wymore, Wilbur, Crest and over the intervening country. In the country around Clay Center, Broken Bow, Dunning, Strang and over most of Gage county the precipitation was from one to one and one-half inches, with two inches or more at Edgar, in the south half of Clay county, and generally through Webster, Kearney, Franklin and Nighlan counties.

Might Hurt Some Grain. Grain and railroad men are of the opinion that coming at this time the heavy rain will injure the small grain that is out and lying on the ground. However, they contend that the damage will be more than offset by the benefit that the corn will derive. Corn nowhere in the state was suffering on account of a lack of moisture, and it is pointed out that the rain coming at this time will give it an additional start and will increase the growth and aid in the earing. Weed comes from the South Platte country, that all the way from McCook to the east line of the state most of the wheat has been cut. However, only a small portion is in shock. Farmers have been short of help to shock and stack, and consequently they have run their harvesting machines day and night, leaving the bundles on the ground. If the wet weather should continue several days, it is asserted that the grain in the bundles might be to sprout, greatly injuring the quality of the grain.

Thomas, 464 Dodge street, and graduated from Central High school a year ago, since which time he has attended the University of Nebraska. Others who may go to the wheat fields are Robert Finley, Edgel Jackson, Frank Kutak and Elmer Pedersen. They have registered with the employment bureau of the Young Men's Christian association.

ESSAYISTS GIVEN PRIZES

Winners of Bee-Buttalo Bill Contest Receive Their Awards.

TRAIN IS LATE IN ARRIVING

Circus Parade is Consequently Delayed for a While, but Satisfies All When it Finally Puts In Appearance.

Winners in The Bee's Buffalo Bill prize essay contest gathered early in front of The Bee building to personally meet the famous old scout and receive their awards from him. The big circus train came in late, however, so the prizes were given out from The Bee business office, in order that the winners might not have to be late in getting lunch and going to the show.

"We all want to see Buffalo Bill," said Ethel Brinkman, 218 South Thirty-fifth avenue, a Busy Bee writer, who turned in a fine essay and won one of the reserved seat prizes.

All the Omaha prize winners, youngsters and grown-ups, were on hand to get their awards personally, and those who received reserved seat tickets to the combined circus and wild west show seemed just as happy as those who won cash prizes.

The Prize Winners. George Hyde, 3025 Burdette street, received the first prize of $15, and Ruby Kingsbell, 322 Center street, won the second prize of $10. The third and fourth prizes of $7.50 and $5, reserved for school children, went to Mollie Corenman of Pacific school, who lives at 805 Pacific street, and to Gale Roscombe of Monmouth school, who resides at 327 Pratt street. Thirty-five other prizes, consisting of reserved seat tickets to the Bella-Floto combined shows, also were given out to the happy prize essayists.

WARRANTS FOR LOT OWNERS

Many Will Be Arrested if They Do Not Out Weeds from Premises.

DR. CONNELL MAKING A FIGHT

Declares Before Council that Citizens Should Take a Little Pledge and Help Keep Omaha Clean.

Warrants for the arrest of 100 real estate men and owners of vacant lots upon which rank growths of weeds have been found by health inspectors will be sworn out by Health Commissioner R. W. Connell under the ordinance for the abatement of nuisances. Dr. Connell instructed his inspectors to notify the owners of these lots for the second time to clean up, warning them that unless the weeds were cut within forty-eight hours from the second notice the warrants would be sworn out and prosecutions would follow. At the instance of the health commissioner the city council in regular session passed a resolution directing the city clerk to publish the names of the offenders against the "nuisance ordinance" and to notify them through the official paper of the city that unless these weeds were cut they would be prosecuted, the city proceeding in the meantime to cut the weeds and assess the cost to the property. Street Commissioner J. J. Ryder, who introduced the resolution directing the city clerk to advertise the names of the offenders, has ordered several gangs of men to keep the weeds cut to the curb, but the condition of the funds of his department will not permit him to go further and cut the weeds on the vacant lots and assess the cost to the property. Dr. Connell said the condition of several vacant lots, on which rubbish and all sorts of debris had been thrown, is a grave menace to health, as well as being favorite rendezvous of bugs and hold-ups. Recently crimes committed from the cover of weeds on vacant lots have stirred up citizens to appear before the city council and demand protection. Health Commissioner Connell pointed out that the owners of lots allowed to run into unsanitary conditions because of rank growths of weeds were in reality responsible for the crimes committed from the cover of these weeds—crimes not possible to prevent because of the limited police force of the city.
