Creighton university yells resounded through the business district of Omaha saturday afternoon, when 1,000 students took that district by storm. Headed by the college band, and bearing insignia of their respective departments, the colle-gians marched through the heart of the city, telling in story and song what they intended to do to Marquette. In the procession was a mock canket draped with the Marquetta colors, blue and gold. Following the procession were the mourners, specially prepared for the occasion.

In the procession were students from all departments, the dental college student's being in the lead. Marching single file, they formed a line four blocks in length. Arriving at the field, the students paraded about the enclosure, yelled themselves hourse and then stood with bared heads while a funeral anthem was played over the Marquette remains.
