RESCUE WORKERS IN WRECKED COAL MINE OVERCOME BY GASES

(Continued from Page One.) South room east. It was for these men that the search was being made by the helmet crew when Lord and Foley met their accident. Early today the arrival of two government rescue cars was being awaited impatiently, as they would bring to the scene fresh and experienced helmet men. Women Keep All Night Vigil. At the earliest peep of dawn this morning, the throng of all-night watchers—women, among whom were mothers whose children had slept in their laps—was augmented by the wives and mothers of the rescue men who, throughout the night, had been delving into the depths of the Mag Canon mine, No. 2, in fruitless search for living miners who have been entombed since Wednesday afternoon, and when the 8 o'clock shift had returned from their two hours' work, more than 5,000 feet from the main entries of the mine, no additions had been made to the list of twenty-three miners who were taken out of the workings alive, up until midnight.

Those miners who were rescued show marked improvement, according to the staff of physicians who are treating them at the miners' hospital. None of them can tell anything which will throw light upon the cause of the explosion or the location of the miners yet entombed. With the exception of Jose Fernandez, the miner taken alive from the sixth chamber east early last night, none of the rescued men were working near the section of the mine when the explosion occurred, but were caught by the debris which fell throughout the mine, blocking completely both entries to the mine. Fernandez, early today, had not recovered sufficiently to talk of the disaster and government and mine officials still have hope that he will be able to tell them something definite concerning the cause of the explosion, inasmuch as he was taken from the mine more than 4,000 feet from the manway, the point which, from the interior aspects of the workings, the explosion was most violent.

A total of forty-three bodies has been recovered from the workings and most of them identified. At noon the bodies of General Superintendent William McDermott and Henry P. McShane, a New York stockholder in the mine, had not been brought to the surface, although helmet men had seen these bodies in the mine.

Scenes at the mine today were particularly pathetic. Added to the women who have pressed the guard lines since Wednesday were the wives of the volunteer helmet men, some of whom piteously beseech their husbands to turn back from the manway.

GARY DEPLORES AGITATION

(Continued from Page One.) Gense has been shaken. It is becoming almost impossible to secure on fair terms on good security and at a reasonable rate of interest the necessary capital to equip or liberally maintain going and successful properties, to say nothing of the additions and extensions which the interests of this great and growing country demand.

"The stability of business, which is essential to its proper and reasonable growth and success, has been interfered with. Our growing population can use our products; it needs food and clothes and material to build; and it is willing and anxious to buy them. It is in need of railroads and ships with the best equipment to carry these products from one point to another and it is willing to pay fair rates for the service. Laborers are willing to work at a reasonable wage and employers are anxious to furnish work and pay liberal compensation. The carrying companies are desirous of providing necessary facilities for adequate transportation. Producers in all departments of industry wish to satisfy the demands for their products at fair prices and to that end they would make the necessary increases in capacity. And those who are able are quite ready to furnish the necessary capital, provided they can be certain of protection against loss or risk.

Volume of Business Too Small. "In short, gentlemen, this country, though hesitating, is eager to do business. The volume of business at this time, although large, because the country is so vast, is not half so great as it ought to be or as it could be. It is high time for all of us to wake up to a realization of the fact that we are in competition with other countries who, by every means in their power, are striving for supremacy; that it is not difficult for us by good management to reach the greatest measure of success in competition with other nations of the world and yet that it is just as easy to fail if our vision is narrow or if we act without due regard to the results."

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—Three women and one man, trapped on the top floor of a six-story factory building, perished in a fire here late today. At 6 o'clock firemen were searching the glowing ruins with searchlights in the belief that many of the 300 persons employed in the building also had perished.

SUGGEST STATEHOOD FOR ISLAND OF PORTO RICO

MOHONK LAKE, N. Y., Oct. 24.—Two remedies for conditions in Porto Rico, statehood and independence, were suggested today at the Lake Mohonk conference of Friends of the Indians and Other Dependent Peoples. Some of the speakers thought the island should be admitted to statehood, others believed the solution of the problem lay in giving the Porto Ricans independence under the protectorate of the United States. The most urgent advocate of independence was Jose de Diego, speaker of the Porto Rican house of delegates. The Right Rev. James H. Van Huden, Protestant Episcopal bishop of Porto Rico from 1902 to 1911, declared that the islanders desired and deserved citizenship.

WOMEN FAIL TO APPLAUD

Mayor Kline Suggests Education as Solution of Liquor Issue.

WELCOMES WORLD'S W. C. T. U.

Delegates Like Only Part of the Opening Address Made by Executive of the City of New York.

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—Mayor Kline was not applauded when, in an address welcoming the delegates of the World's Woman's Christian Temperance union to New York City today, he suggested that the solution of the liquor problem lay not in absolute prohibition, but in a gradual process of education.

Prolonged handclapping greeted his remark that "I understand some of you believe in total abstinence."

"I see that all of you do," he continued, "but I cannot help thinking that 'temperance' is the better word to emphasize. It is well to recognize and not antagonize the element in human nature that rebels against sudden drastic reform."

"In this city there is a great difference of opinion as to what the excise laws should be to and how they should be enforced. At one extreme there is a faction that asks for absolute prohibition, (the mayor was here warmly applauded). At the other extreme is the faction that wants a wide open town. In between there is a body of good citizens who believe a certain amount of personal liberty is not inconsistent with proper regulation. The solution is not in sudden repression, but in a gradual process of education."

The mayor added, however, that the best sentiment upheld the Women's Christian Temperance union and that its efforts were bound in the long run to educate people to the conviction that temperance was best for the nation.

At the afternoon session Mrs. Frances Barnes, secretary of the young woman's branch, told the delegates that it was time for the organization to take a stand in regard to women's dress.

"There is a goddess who rules over all womankind," she said, "the goddess of fashion. If the women of the Woman's Christian Temperance union wish to make progress in abating the evils of the world they should dress their little children in skirts below the knees. We will never make headway against the white slavery traffic until women wear more moderate skirts. I think there is reason for adopting a new department in the Woman's Christian Temperance union to be called 'clothes department.'"
