These dwellings must not be confused with the ordinary type of house—they were built by day labor, skilled mechanics and first-class materials being used throughout. Six fine, large rooms, also sleeping porch and bathroom to each dwelling. Oak finish downstairs except kitchen. Fine pressed brick fire place and built-in book-cases in living room; mirror door in coat closet; burlap with panel strips and plate rail in dining room; butler's pantry, having plenty of drawers and shelving; good-sized kitchen, with ample refrigerator space. Three fine, large chambers, one in white enamel, with mahogany doors; glass knobs on upstairs hardware. Bathrooms are finished in white enamel; has tile floor and fine plumbing fixtures. Sleeping porches have south, north and east windows; clothes chute, patent coal chute, floor drain, coal and fruit bing pressed brick foundation; full cemented basement.
