Omaha Man Selects Farm on Which Pool Had Set His Heart

HYANNIS, Neb., Nov. 18.—(Special Telegram.)—Increased interest and an increased number of selections marked the proceedings in the allotment of the lands in the North Platte forest reserve today. Yesterday twenty-three selections were made, but by the middle of the afternoon today that number had been passed. The first to be admitted into the map room this morning by Judge Witten was Victor Harris of Loomis.

When No. 53, Alex Sund, an Omaha man who is in charge of the elevators in the Burlington headquarters building, made his selection he brought keen disappointment to Charles W. Pool of Lincoln, state labor commissioner. The land commissioner, whose number is 54, had chosen a certain section about twenty miles south of Hyannis and was prepared to have lumber hauled out as soon as he made his filing. He was reported to have said that he would gladly sacrifice $100 if his choice remained until his number was called. However, No. 56 entitled him to one of a number of good sections remaining and he chose section 8, Township 22, range 32.

That he did not reach El Paso seems certain. A Nation-Wide Movement

The Bee is a member of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, Bureau of Advertising, Group of whose purposes are:

- (1) To point out to newspaper readers everywhere the benefit to be derived from an active interest in newspaper advertising and the wealth of valuable information it contains. (2) To build up and perpetuate a continental association among the better newspapers which will eliminate unreliable advertising. (3) To create a fuller appreciation, in the minds of makers and sellers of nationally distributed articles, of the value of daily newspaper advertising. This association has progressed a long way toward these ends. The responsibility for the success of this movement rests not alone with the newspapers themselves, but also with the readers. Readers of The Bee already appreciate the valuable avenues of information opened to them through its advertising pages. They can help us by patronizing the reliable advertisers whose announcements they read in this newspaper; and by notifying us if they are ever led into an unsatisfactory transaction through advertising appearing in The Bee.
