

DRISCOLL SOME DETECTIVE

Has Sherlock Holmes and Steve Maloney Beaten by a Block.

LOCATES WOMAN WHO IS LOST

Directs the Nurse Where to Go Until the Missing Woman is Finally Located Having a Pair of Shoes.

Sherlock Holmes may have drawn vicariously at his pipe while unraveling the knotty problems of London crime; Steve Maloney may have laid aside his stogy and frowned forbiddingly while he contemplated the mystery of who fired the bullet into the brick wall; but for real detective work the laurel falls on F. W. Driscoll, a young lawyer in the Omaha National Bank building. And he does not advertise as a detective, either. He is a lawyer, and neither smokes a Holmes pipe or takes shots in the arm to stimulate his brain convolutions.

But he sat right in his office Monday and, without even lighting a cigarette, told a nurse of the Roselle sanitarium just exactly where she could find Mrs. Steeper, a patient who had run away from the sanitarium.

"Where do you suppose I could find that woman?" said the nurse, who knew Mr. Driscoll well and who was in trouble because she was sent out to find the escaped patient and hadn't the slightest idea where she might locate her.

"Well, how should I know where to find the old lady?" queried Driscoll somewhat impatiently.

"Well, I thought maybe you could suggest something," replied the nurse, "for you cannot know less about it than I do."

"Well, if that is the case I'll try to help you. Is she apt to be a little flighty at times?"

"Well, then, the first place I should look would be the city library, for a bunch of queer people hang out there in the afternoon. I found a man there not long ago that was plowing through ponderous volumes trying to trace his ancestry to George Washington."

At the library the nurse was told the woman had just been there asking whether William Allen White was smooth shaven or whether he still wore his mustache. But she had just stepped out when she had learned these important facts about White.

The nurse came back to Driscoll. "We'll try the dentist," he advised, when he found that the woman had been having some dental work done. She tried the dentist, but the woman had not even been there. Back to Driscoll's office went the nurse, somewhat discouraged.

Then the mighty Driscoll began his first detective work. "What kind of clothes does she wear?" he asked. "Are they in good condition or are they ragged. Has she a good hat or a poor one? Are her shoes and stockings good? Is she warmly dressed for this weather?"

He was told that the woman was dressed well enough except that her shoes were poor.

The mighty Driscoll looked up sharply. "Go to the Brandeis shoe department at once," he said. "Lose no time." The little nurse hurried.

There she found her with a new pair of shoes on just preparing to have them charged.

The mighty Driscoll smiled and took the elevator to the street, where he bought himself a stogy.

No Successor to Guild Yet Named

J. M. Guild, former commissioner of the Commercial club, left this afternoon for Dayton, O., where he takes the position of executive secretary of the Greater Dayton association of that place. Mr. Guild's family will not accompany him at this time, as the beautiful home in the Field club district has not yet been sold. Until that is sold the family will live here.

Poppleton Buried at Prospect Hill

Funeral services for W. S. Poppleton, the well known lawyer, who accidentally killed himself in his office in the City National Bank building Saturday afternoon, were conducted at the late home of the deceased, 234 South Thirty-seventh street, at 2:30 o'clock yesterday by Dean James A. Tancock of Trinity Cathedral.

LINEN CARGO DAMAGED AND BOUGHT BY A LOCAL FIRM

When the steamship Patricia came into New York harbor on October 28 a portion of its cargo was refused on account of alleged water damage. An immense shipment of linens, stored in a portion of the vessel not designed for carrying merchandise, became slightly wet in transit. After the goods were refused they were sold at a 40 per cent reduction. It is a matter of local interest that an Omaha firm bought the linens in the stock the very day they landed.

WINTER TRAVEL VERY HEAVY

Many Will Go to the Panama Canal This Year.

NEW CRUISE TO THE ORIENT

Following Year the World Tour Will Include Trip Through Panama Canal and Visit to Prince Exposition.

The volume of tourist travel this winter promises to pass all previous records. This remarkable winter migration will soon begin in all parts of the country and follow the popular routes in search of milder climates. Winter cruising is no longer an expensive luxury as in the past, but has been brought within the reach of people of moderate means and leisure. A number of attractive pleasure cruises have been arranged, varying in length from fifteen days to three months, which will carry the traveler quickly and luxuriously from bleak northern winter weather to tropical waters.

The most popular cruise this winter will doubtless be to the West Indies and the Panama Canal. Now that the canal is practically completed and visitors may see the great locks in actual operation, thousands of travelers who have delayed visiting the isthmus will make the cruise. This season tourists will have the opportunity to cruise to the West Indies and the isthmus of Panama on larger and more luxurious steamers than ever before. A series of six cruises from New York to the West Indies and the Panama Canal, varying in length from fifteen to twenty-nine days, is announced by the Hamburg-American line. Two of these cruises will be made by the steamship Amerika, one of the most famous of the transatlantic steamers, which is equipped with Ritz-Carlton restaurant, gymnasium and electric elevators. The fact that the Amerika as well as the famous cruising steamer Victoria Louise will be used in this cruising service in southern waters shows the wonderful advance in this passenger traffic.

An entirely new cruise will be made this season, about three months duration, through the Mediterranean, visiting the orient and India. The cruise will be made by the world famous cruiser, the steamship Cleveland. The tourists will visit the popular resorts of the Mediterranean, pass through the Suez canal and the Red sea, and proceed to India, where ample time will be allowed for inland trips, when the steamer will return to New York. The grand cruise de luxe will be the trip around the world which will be made next year by way of the Panama Canal. The cruise will be made by the steamship Cleveland, which will sail from New York, and, after passing through the isthmus, will call at San Francisco for the opening of the Panama-Pacific exposition on its way around the world.

Mediterranean Sea the Grand Object of Mid-winter Travel

Eminent travelers say the grand object of travel is to see the shores of the Mediterranean. On these shores were the four great empires of the world; the Assyrian, the Persian, the Grecian and the Roman. All our religion, almost all our law, almost all our arts, almost all that sets us above the savages, has come to us from the shores of the Mediterranean.

Passengers are thus afforded a more comprehensive view than otherwise would be possible of this ever-interesting section of the world, where today meets yesterday's face in fact, and where, in very fact, our modern civilization secured its first great inspiration.

Trip to the Canal Zone Is Popular For the Tourists

A popular trip, and one that Omaha tourists are booking now, says J. D. Miller, assistant general agent of the Northwestern Line, is the cruises of the Peninsular & Occidental Steamship company from Key West to the canal zone. Ample time is given to inspect the canal, while stops are made at Havana and Kingston. Returning to Florida and not wishing to return to the north until spring, the traveler may spend his time at some of Florida's eastern coasted noted resorts, viz., Miami with its famous Royal Palm hotel, Palm Beach, noted for its Royal Poinciana, and St. Augustine, the home of the Ponce de Leon and Alcazar. At this time of the year Florida is the playground of the world. Golf and tennis are favored by many, while others find fishing and hunting their recreation.

The low priced tours to Florida, which can be had in connection with these cruises make a great advantage.

Speaking of Reputation—

If any of your friends ask you: "Say, I wonder what sort of clothes this fellow Brooks carries, anyway?" just tell them that Brooks features "Society Brand" clothes, "Strouse & Bros." clothes and "Stern-Mayer" clothes. Then, too, Brooks was always ahead enough to buy other nationally famous lines for less than the other Omaha dealers paid for them. Just now, for instance, "Brooks" is offering his "last coat" inducement on a line of clothing purchased from a maker whose product is handled right now in Omaha by another dealer, "Brooks," in order to be allowed to cut the price in the first place, was compelled to cut the labels from the clothes, but the bill of sale is here, and if you buy the same clothes from another Omaha establishment at a fancy figure it's your fault.

Clothes may rant; clothes may promissinate and advocate; the fact remains, nevertheless, that this is the greatest clothing event ever offered to Omahans and the Omaha knows it.
