MONEY BILLS TO SENATE

Divided Committee to Report Three Separate Measures.

PREPARATIONS FOR THE FIGHT
Battle Over Proposed Reform of Currency System Will Begin on Floor of Upper Body Tomorrow.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—Final preparations were made today for the battle over the administration currency reform bill on the floor of the senate, which will begin Saturday. Three separate currency bills, all based upon the same general theory, will be placed before the senate by the divided banking and currency committee.

Unable to agree on amendments the committee will present the Glass-Owen bill as originally endorsed by the administration and passed by the house. The measure with amendments assumed to be acceptable to the president will be submitted by Chairman Owen and five other democrats of the committee, Senators Pomeroy, Hollis, Reed, O'Gorman and Shafroth. A bill materially changing the structure of the house measure will be presented by the republicans, Senators Nelson, Weeks, Brydow, McLean and Crawford and Senator Hitchcock.

All three of the proposed bills contemplate the issue of a currency secured by the prime commercial paper held by the banks of the country. Each proposes the establishment of reserve banks, which will issue the currency in exchange for commercial paper, to the banks, hold the reserves behind their deposits, mobilized for use in any emergency, and rediscunt the paper held by banks in the system, thus keeping available always credit and currency to ward off financial crises. The bills propose to put the entire system under the control of a federal reserve board to be appointed by the president.

Number of Reserve Banks.
Although agreeing as to the purposes to be accomplished by the proposed legislation the three plans differ in almost every point in attempting to carry out these purposes. As it passed the house the Glass-Owen bill proposed the creation of twelve regional banks. The democrats of the senate committee cut them to eight, the minimum number the president was willing to accept. The republicans reduced the number to four, holding that the smaller number could more effectively concentrate the reserves of the country.

The twelve regional banks proposed by the house bill would be owned by the banks, through compulsory subscription to the stock and the banks would elect six of the nine directors of each regional institution. This plan was retained by the democrats of the senate committee, although it was further provided if the banks did not furnish enough capital to run the system, the stock might be sold to the public. On this point Senator Hitchcock and the republicans departed from the administration theory of creating a "bank banks" and materially changed the bill. They provided that the reserve banks' capital should be subscribed by the public, the banks taking whatever part the public would not take, and that the government through the federal reserve board should appoint five of the nine directors of each regional bank. This was the proposition which split the senate committee into two camps.

The democrats voted down the reserve board in an effort to arrange a program for the debate and to determine how the bills shall be handled on the floor of the senate.

Reserve Materially Reduced.
Each of the bills materially reduced the present reserve which national banks must hold against deposits. The house bill would fix the reserve at 12 per cent for country banks, and 15 per cent for banks in present reserve cities. These rates were retained by the administration forces in the senate committee, but the republicans voted out down the reserve of the city banks to 15 per cent. In the house bill the paper made eligible for rediscunt and as a basis for currency is commercial paper based on actual merchandising transactions, maturing in not less than ninety days. This provision was retained by the democrats in the senate committee, but the republicans broadened it materially. Under their bill a part of the member banks' rediscunts may be made in paper maturing up to six months. The provision gives the advantage to banks with small capital which have little so-called short-time paper.

Under the house bill and the draft by the senate committee democrats the regional bank directors would have discretion as to rediscouting for member banks without limit. In the republican bill each member is given the right to select rediscunt up to the full amount to its capital and under a tax to twice that amount.

The gold reserve to be held by the regional banks in their vaults and in the treasury against the new circulation is fixed at 33 1/2 per cent in both the house bill and the measure drawn by the senate committee democrats. The republican draft, however, provides for a 35 per cent reserve with a tax on reserves below that figure down to a minimum of 25 per cent. The house bill provides for redemption of the new notes in "gold or lawful money" at the treasury or at the reserve banks. The Owen amendment would make the notes redeemable in gold at the treasury and gold or lawful money at the banks and the republican draft would provide for a straight gold redemption in both instances.

Both the house bill and the Owen bill would allow country banks to loan on one-year farm mortgages. The republicans amended this to allow banks to loan one-third of their time deposits on five-year farm mortgages.

The republicans eliminated from the bill a provision which would have required national banks to maintain separate departments to handle savings account business. Numerous other differences, principally on minor matters of relating to the language of the measure, are apparent.

To prevent a disturbance of financial conditions while bank reserves are being shifted to the proposed new regional banks, the Owen bill would provide that banks may deposit commercial paper and currency as part of their reserve, under certain conditions. The Hitchcock-republican bill would extend the life of the Aldrich-Vreeland emergency law for another year.

WAR ON TEMPORARY BRIDGES

Iowa Highway Commission Carries on Campaign.

COUNTY ENGINEERS SURPRISED

Total of Amounts Expended So Far Will Run Into Figures that Astonish When They Are Added Up.

AMES, Ia., Nov. 21.—(Special.)—The Iowa State Highway commission in its session here yesterday decided to show the people of Iowa the nonsense of the extravagant economy in year after year spending hundreds of thousands of good hard dollars for the repair of ramshackle bridges and culverts when concrete or steel structures, which require little maintenance expense, just as a matter of plan "hard headed" business, should be built in the first place.

The commission issued orders to every county engineer and county board of supervisors in the state to compile and file as soon as possible with the commission a detailed and complete statement of every cent spent in their respective counties during the year 1912 on repairs for temporary wooden bridges and culverts. The commission will get the exact figures of the various county books, and not indefinite estimates. Chief Engineer Thomas H. MacDonald says he has no idea how much the aggregated county totals will amount to, but that, judging from the surprise expressed by the county engineers as they uncover their county's outlay, the figure will run perhaps into the millions.

The report of the office engineers to the commission stated that so far this year the commission has made special plans on request of the counties for $677,061.12 worth of bridge construction; approved plans, which were submitted for approval, for $300,000 worth more, and made detailed shop drawings for $150,000 worth of steel bridge superstructures.

A committee of county engineers has been going over plans looking to the standardization of county road blanks with the object of making the bridge books and records of the counties similar. But all other things are minorities with the commission while it wages relentless campaign on temporary bridges, showing up the enormous waste annually in the repair of wooden structures.

OMAHA HOTEL CLERKS HOLD THEIR THIRD ANNUAL DANCE

Omaha members of the Nebraska and Iowa Hotel Clerks' association last night held their third annual dance at the Rome hotel. A special orchestra furnished music and played popular airs. The ball room was decorated with palms and colored streamers and light refreshments were served in the adjoining room. About seventy-five couples were present, among them were many out-of-town members. John W. Kennedy, Charles W. Miller, F. W. Rothery and Joseph McCaffrey composed the committee in charge of the affair.

Recognizes Old Lover Before Death Comes By Her Own Hand

DENVER, Nov. 21.—(Special Telegram.)—Mrs. Myrtle Kephart, who shot herself at the residence of Judge Ernest Morris, Monday morning, died at the county hospital today. The death of Mrs. Kephart ends a romance of school days, when she was the sweetheart of Joseph Kehoe, a telegraph operator at Potter, Neb., who came to Denver yesterday in response to a telegram.

It is said that Kehoe and the girl, only 17 at the time of her death, quarreled during the courtship and she married William Anderson of Denver through spite. Anderson disappeared following a family disagreement. Kehoe was recognized by his former sweetheart before she expired.

CARTER LAKE CLUB MEMBERS MEET TONIGHT AT PAXTON

The annual meeting of the associate members of the Carter Lake club will be held this evening at 8 o'clock, at the Paxton hotel. Four directors to serve for the coming year will be elected and plans for improvements in the grounds will also be discussed. All interested in the welfare of the organization have been asked to attend.

Nurse Testifies in the Jewett Case of Trip to Omaha

BLAIR, Neb., Nov. 21.—(Special Telegram.)—In the murder trial of GEORGE S. Jewett of Omaha, accused of the death of his 3-weeks-old child, the prosecution played another trump card yesterday by introducing the testimony of Dr. Brit of Creighton, and Mrs. Sarah Adams, a nurse of Creighton.

Former testimony has almost entirely taken in the finding of the body and the identification of the infant's garments and wraps. The testimony of Dr. Brit took up the thread of evidence from Creighton where the child was born.

He said that the child was born prematurely, and he advised Jewett, on account of the infant's weakened condition, not to make the trip to Omaha.

Mrs. Sarah Adams, the nurse, on the witness stand aided the prosecution to trace the taking of the child from the Jewett home in Creighton, by auto to Plainview, and thence to the Paxton hotel in Omaha, by train. She accompanied Jewett on the trip.

Mrs. Adams testified as to dressing the child and then told that Jewett, against her advice, had placed it in a satchel, and started for "Dr. Crookston's place."

The last she saw of the child alive was when Jewett carried the satchel away, holding his finger between the opening in the bag so that the child could breathe. That was at midnight, the day Jewett arrived in Omaha.

The child's body was found near Arlington the next day, dressed in the clothing that Mrs. Adams had put on.

When she met Jewett the next morning they checked out of the Paxton hotel and started for Creighton.

Mrs. Adams later reading a newspaper account of the finding of a tiny body near the railroad tracks where it had been hurled from a moving train asked Jewett: "That can't be your baby, can it?" Jewett replied, "No, my baby is well and all right. You don't think I'd be dancing around here if it was my baby, do you?"

J. P. McGill, deputy sheriff of Knox county, who with Sheriff Compton arrested Jewett, said after Jewett was arrested he said, "For God's sake, what have I done. My baby is well and when the time comes I will produce it."

TWO NEW ENGINES ARRIVE IN ROCK ISLAND YARDS

Two of the fifty new passenger engines ordered by the Rock Island several months ago have arrived and are being lumbered up in the Omaha and Council Bluffs yards prior to being put into service on the Omaha-Council Bluffs run. The Rock Island's new engines are from the Baldwin shops and are of the super-heater type, the largest machines of the kind turned out. They each measure ninety feet over all and weigh 33,000 pounds without their loads of water and fuel. They are equipped with four drive wheels on each side and are capable of hauling fifteen steel coaches seventy-five miles per hour.

Until the Rock Island's road is rebuilt none of the new engines will be used on the lines west of the Missouri river, the bridges not being strong enough to carry the machines.

Iowa News Notes.
IOWA FALLS—This city seems destined to be without gas service until spring as the result of the postponement of the gas company suit now pending in the district court until the January term. Several points are involved in the litigation, and it is evident no more can be made to rehabilitate the plant until these matters are adjudicated by the courts. The plant, which was demolished by a runaway Rock Island engine, is being dismantled and some of the material will be used in a new plant when built.
