

Free Turkeys and Other Gifts for Your Thanksgiving

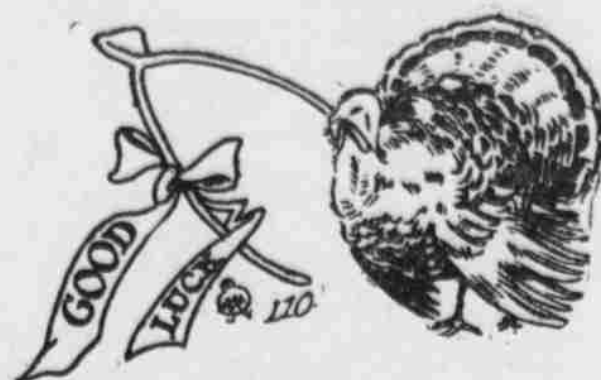

The Bee will award a large turkey free for the best answer to each of the eight questions propounded below, one turkey for each question.

You may send in one or more answers to each question. Each answer must be written on a separate sheet of paper and bear the name and address of the author.

Answers must be in The Bee Office not later than 6 P. M. Monday, November 24.

Winners will be announced on this page Tuesday evening.

Address answers to the "Thanksgiving Editor," The Bee.

GIVING ALL YOU CAN FOR WHAT YOU GET

Forty-four consecutive, successful weeks have demonstrated the possibility and feasibility of operating an industry upon the policy of "giving all you can for what you get, and not of getting all you can for what you give."

The Empress Theater was opened January 20th of this year. The twenty-one days this summer that the thermometer passed the one hundred mark had very little of a retardant effect upon the patronage. The crowds kept coming, and since the beginning of the regular theatrical season they have constantly grown, until now about the only complaint one hears is that you can never get in, and the truth is that there are only about four times in the day that it is possible to obtain main floor seats. These hours are the hours at which the vaudeville performances begin, namely, at 2:30, 3:30, 7:30 and 9 o'clock. The theater remains open from noon until 11 o'clock at night, showing pictures exclusively at dinner and supper time. Of course, there is lots of room at this time.

The best of vaudeville acts have been secured. The cost of the show did not enter into consideration, when quality was concerned. Acts direct from the big eastern vaudeville circuit are shown, week after week, and the photo plays are the best that money can buy, and are absolutely first run at all times.

Approximately one-fourth of the population of Omaha attends the Empress theater each week, a record that is practically without equal in the United States today. Watch the crowds. There must be a reason.—Advertisement.
