Come! Let us take our prated prayers, review them and examine:

Are they because our feast is full while others share a famine?

Are they because we ride the road which others pick and shove!?

Are they because our wais are wide while others crowd a hove!?

Are they because our limbs are swathed, while some are rawed by weather?

Or are they only for the gifts we all may share together?

Thanks are not thanks which only make another's want our measure.
