

Society

By MELLIFICIA. Thursday, November 27, 1913.

IN NEW YORK, dancing artists of the stage have been teaching society the intricacies of the tango for many moons, but Omaha has not been so fortunate. Next Tuesday, however, Omaha's society will receive a real treat, for Joseph Santley, famous exponent of the tango, who will then be in Omaha at the Brandeis theater, will attend a tango tea to be given at the Country club on that day. Mr. Santley will be accompanied by his dancing partner, Mrs. Ruth Randall, and the pair will not only dance at the function, but will instruct Omaha's debutante set in the science of the Santley tango.

Saranoff, the Russian violinist, has also been asked to be present at the affair.

The patronesses of the tango tea will be Mrs. Charles T. Kountze, Mrs. W. T. Burns, Mrs. Samuel Burns, Jr.; Mrs. J. T. Stewart, 2d.; Mrs. Fred Hamilton, Mrs. Glenn Wharton.

Thanksgiving Affairs.

Mrs. John Engel entertained at a Thanksgiving dinner Sunday at her home, 206 Cumins St., in honor of Miss Mary Lamprecht of McArdleville. White and yellow chrysanthemums were used in the decorations. Covers were laid for eighteen guests.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Taylor entertained at Thanksgiving dinner, when their guests were: Mr. Charles Lees of Philadelphia, Mr. Edwin Hammond of Philadelphia, Mr. and Mrs. H. T. Whitman gave a family dinner celebration both Thanksgiving and their eleventh wedding anniversary which have fallen on the same date for the first time since their marriage on Thanksgiving, 1892. Covers were laid for ten.

Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Peters had a family dinner party, when those present were: Mrs. M. C. Peters, Misses Gladys and Eugenia Peters, Mrs. Robt. Morgan, Miss Dorothy Morgan, Mr. Ralph Peters, Mr. and Mrs. S. S. Carby and two children, Virginia and Samuel.

Dance in Dundee.

One of the many high school affairs given during the Thanksgiving holidays was a dance at Dundee hall, Wednesday evening, given by the Nones club, one of the girls' social societies of the school. Waikating and two-steping was strictly tabooed and the tango was the order for the evening. Those present were:

- Misses—Margaret McCoy, Marion Weller, Pauline Trout, Elizabeth Crawford, Grace Harter, Helen Burgess, Margaret Raffan, Grace Elabough, F. J. Simpson, Louise Hupp.
- Messrs—Charles W. Smith, Ralph Benedict, Gilbert Eldredge, Gerald Bruce, Ernest Sturdivant, Merton Wakeley.

Theater Parties.

Mr. Albert Busch will entertain at a theater party this evening at the Brandeis for Miss Marguerite Busch and Mr. Thomas Hayward of Pittsburgh, whose wedding takes place Saturday evening. Following the theater they will have supper at the Omaha club. Those present will be:

- Misses—Marguerite Busch, George Trimble, Helen Spentzer, Emma, Thomas Hayward, Leon Callahan, Arthur Trimble.
- Misses—Edna Hume, Eula Fierow, Irene Higgins, Bernice Brown, Florence Britt, L. Patterson, Mary Carrier, Estelle Leach, Frances Stolinsky, Dora Haakman, English, Helen Grady, Kiehl Patrick, Helen Rosen, Bernice Marx, Emma Kretzberg, Lillian Peterson, Edith Maloney, Irma Lundgard, Adeline Specht, Odette Jackson, Elna, Ruth Fisher, Hulda Armstrong, Marie Kung, Magdaline Beck, Mildred Heath, Messrs—A. Beckman, Dr. N. H. Attwood, A. L. Nurno.

Et-A-Virg Club.

The Et-A-Virg club gave the second of its series of dancing parties at the Brandeis Tuesday evening. Chrysanthemums were used as favors. The following were present:

- Misses—Nettie Schooley, Anna Noble, Adeline Wright, Anne Bloom, Muriel Jeffertes, Miss Gentry, Slabunack, Laura M. Peterson, Edna Feltz, Lillian Peterson, Mary Horn, Rose Gordy, Francis Meicher, Frances Thomas, Margaret Lane, Dora Olsen, Blanche Springer, Edith Maloney, Irma Lundgard, Adeline Specht, Odette Jackson, Elna, Ruth Fisher, Hulda Armstrong, Marie Kung, Magdaline Beck, Mildred Heath, Messrs—A. Grandma Never Let Her Hair Get Gray

Kept her locks youthful, dark glossy and thick with compound garden Sage and Sulphur.

When you darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur, no one can tell because it's done so naturally, so evenly. Preparing this mixture, though, at home is messy and troublesome. For 30 cents free send boy at any drug store the ready-to-use bottle called "Wyn's Sage and Sulphur Hair Kemptory." You just dip a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning all gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully darkened, glossy and lustrous. You will also discover dandruff is gone and hair has stopped falling. Freely faded hair, though no longer in a state of old age, and as we all desire a youthful and attractive appearance, get busy at once with Wyn's Sage and Sulphur and look years younger. —Advertisement.

BOMBARD GARD'S TESTIMONY

Witnesses Before Judge Sears Contradict Their Fellow Juror.

EVIDENCE TENDS TO IMPEACH

Denial that There Was an Attempt to Prevent Accuser from Participating in Any Proceedings.

Wesley Gard, the lone witness upon whose testimony Brome & Brome, attorneys for Cadet Taylor in his recent libel suit against The Bee, are basing their attempt to secure a new trial, was described as having continually expressed his admiration for the Bromes and his opinion that Taylor "should have damages" to other jurors throughout the libel trial, at Wednesday's session of the contempt hearing before Judge Sears.

The testimony of the other jurors, among whom are men well known in their various occupations, was the first introduced for the defense, and hit the carefully constructed evidence of Gard with the force of a battering ram. Judge Sears evidenced interest in their statements by questions of his own concerning statements directly contradicting Gard. Much of their evidence was what is termed impeaching testimony, tending to prove that Gard had not been telling the truth.

That Gard from the second day of the trial till near its close continually consulted first one fellow juror, then another, telling them that Taylor deserved damages, that he had been slandered, that he deserved $10,000, that H. C. Brome was a good lawyer, that his son Clinton was almost as good, that they had a fine suite of offices, that the elder Brome was as nervous in his office as in the court room and similar things where they stood, was testified by yesterday's witnesses.

One after another they told how Gard had persistently followed them around trying to persuade them to "be with him" for Taylor, and of their refusal to commit themselves before the evidence was all in.

What Really Happened in Room.

One after another, too, the other jurors told what happened in the jury room, completely contradicting the weird tale put up by Gard, instead of ignoring him and organizing with him alone over in one corner, as he claimed, they testified that they were all together in the middle of the room when they chose their foreman, and that the choice was unanimous. One of them, Juror Downs, declared that when the matter of Gard's concealing his connection with the Bromes was brought up, and he urged that Gard should have told the truth to the court, Gard pounded the table and jumped up and down, "like a crazy man." The other jurors also contradicted Gard's assertion that he was "forced" into signing the verdict, corroborating one another that the instructions had been read over several times in an effort to persuade him and that finally Gard took the instructions himself, sitting aside while reading them for nearly three-quarters of an hour, and at last jumped up and himself volunteering, "Well, boys, I'll be with you now and join in the verdict."

Gard is Contradicted.

C. Benson, 129 South Twenty-fifth avenue, a young man whose family is well known in Omaha, and who was married during the progress of the libel trial, and M. J. Howell, grocer, 173 Leavenworth street, gave in brief language detailed accounts of the actions of the jury and Gard in particular. The other statements were similar. Statements by Gard gotten into the record as a result of a request by him earlier in the day concerning mistreatment which he said he received in the jury room were flatly contradicted by the witnesses. They denied that he was prevented from participating in the choice of a foreman, calling attention to the fact that he stood near the others when the choice was made and that the choice was unanimous. They testified that Gard was alone in a room opening out of the jury room with Juror J. A. McCarthy, a fact which Gard had denied. They gave testimony on a larger number of issues so important that the question of veracity is squarely raised between Gard and his fellow jurors.

If the judge holds that Gard did not tell the truth concerning his relations with other jurors, this is expected to have weight in determining the value to be placed on his other assertions. In his alleged conversations with Charles Belange, defendant in the contempt case, there were no witnesses except his wife, his small son, and, on one occasion, a grocery boy. The grocery boy admitted on the stand that he had heard none of the conversation, but testified that he did hear some of it.

Opinion by Brome's Client.

J. A. McCarthy, a carpenter, who served as a juror in the libel case, testified that Gard, client of Brome & Brome, expressed the opinion early in the trial that Taylor should have "good damages." Gard is the juror who held out for nine hours against The Bee, finally agreed to a verdict for The Bee, acquiesced to it in the court room and immediately afterward in an affidavit prepared in the Bromes' office declared Charles Belange, a barber, had tried to bribe him and that the other jurors were guilty of misconduct. Assertions made by Gard and allowed in the record by his own request, con-

Hennessy, who was former Governor Sulzer's graft investigator, in authority for the statement that two men will make a confession in the John Doe proceedings in New York next Monday which will involve a "high state official," and possibly others. The nature of the alleged crime will be the most startling that has been exposed in the entire graft investigation, Hennessy maintains, and it will involve the passing of money.

Persistent Advertising is the Road to Business Success.

Gard admitted calling on Brome. Gard was reproved by Mr. Baker and Judge Sears several times for repeated attempts to volunteer statements, and on one of these occasions demanded that Mr. Baker should not be so "cross" to him.

Immediately after resumption of the hearing Gard was returned to the stand for further cross-examination. Gard denied that he and his wife had even gone to Brome's office more than twice. After repeated denials, he admitted that he had been there four times. Mrs. Gard said last Friday that they had on numerous occasions gone to Brome's office without any particular object in view. She admitted that they had been there more than four times, by order of the judge, the witnesses separated so that none may hear what the other says on the stand.

When asked why he had not reported to Judge Sears the alleged approaches made to him, according to the judge's instructions, but, instead, had gone to Brome's office Gard said he did not know when it was proper to reveal the circumstances.

Gard asserted that other jurors told him the judge had instructed the jury to bring in a verdict for the defense. The instructions of the judge, in accordance with custom, were taken into the jury room for consideration by the jurors. Gard had previously been a juror, and a year ago last spring was on a jury which returned a verdict of $5,000 for a plaintiff for whom the Bromes were attorneys in a personal injury suit, on which the lawyers had admitted a 50 per cent fee.

Gard filled a 50 per cent fee by the other jurors of "tipping them off" to the Bromes.

Culls from the Wire

WEST POINT MAN HURT IN AUTO UPSET AT PENDER

WEST POINT, Neb., Nov. 27.—(Special.)—W. L. Smith of West Point met with an automobile accident Saturday. In approaching the town of Pender he noticed that one of the rear doors of his car was springing open and in reaching back to shut the door accidentally turned the steering wheel, causing the car to run into the ditch, turning a double somersault and throwing him with great violence to the ground, where he laid unconscious for some time. A neighbor came to the rescue and after a time the injured man recovered sufficiently to be taken to town. No permanent ill effects are anticipated. Miss Vera Armstrong of Wisner, an advance student in the domestic science department of the state university has been engaged to speak and demonstrate at the farmer's institutes, to be held this winter in this part of the state.

Good Menus for Mothers

Shows Mothers How to Clothe "Kiddies" and Prepare Their Meals at Low Cost.

GOOD MENUS FOR ALL HOUSEWIVES

WHERE 'WE' THERE'S A WAY —Chicago's New Preacher.

BY HENRY M. HYDE

THERE are at present about 350 families on the pension rolls. Every family is visited at least once a month by one of the Juvenile probation officers, each of whom has one of the twelve districts into which the city is divided under her charge. Miss Nesbitt makes many of these visits with the regular officers.

Since the pensioned mothers are themselves in a needy public office, each of them in charge of the proper rearing of a number of future citizens, they are required to keep accurate accounts of the way in which they spend the public fund.

It is Miss Nesbitt's work to go over these accounts with the various mothers and to suggest how they can get more for the money they have to spend. She is even ready to prepare special menus, adapted to the different families by showing which delicious and nourishing meals may be served at a cost within the family budget.

And if there is any dish on the list which the mother does not know how to cook, Miss Nesbitt will demonstrate on the spot the best method of its preparation.

IN order that this service may be more widely extended through the city, Miss Nesbitt is now engaged in giving a series of lessons to the eighty nurses of the Visiting Nurses' association.

There are, doubtless, many housewives in the city not on the pension list who would be glad to profit by this expert advice and direction. With that idea in mind, THE TRIBUNE prints the menus for seven consecutive days prepared for a family consisting of the mother and four sons, aged respectively 12, 8, 5, and 2 years old. All the food used for the three meals of each day can be purchased in the Chicago market for 50 cents, provided these supplies are bought in proper quantities.
