Fashion Hint

By LA RAconteuse.

Stronger and stronger grows the popularity of these small coats. Built on the kimono lines it shows several "godels" at the bottom that it trimmed with three gathered flounces "a la vieille" of picot fallie gathered beneath a small band of silver fox. The sleeves, cut with a seam crossing the over-arm, is finished by a small flounce of fallie crossed by a band of the same fur. A broad square collar, edged with fallie and fur, trims the neck.

Turkeys Are Now a Scarce Article Here

Although turkeys were selling around in the blue sky for a week or so before Thanksgiving and nobody believed anybody outside of bank and railroad presidents would be able to eat genuine turkey, the empty condition of the larders of the various retail stores and commission houses seems to indicate that there were very few unfortunates in Omaha who did not receive at least a mouthful of the delicious morsel. Even the largest commission houses were stripped of nearly all the turkey they had. Ducks, geese and chickens went just as fast. At Hayden's but fifty pounds of any kind of fowl remained after the Thanksgiving rush and at other places conditions were similar.

NEW COLD STORAGE PLANT IS TO BE BUILT IN OMAHA

The company has its own architects in Chicago that are drawing the plans. It is to be a two-story brick building with fireproof gravel roof. It is to have an ice capacity of 175 tons and a storage capacity of 2,000 tons.

F. E. SANBORN FUNERAL HELD

Services Are Conducted at All Saints Episcopal Church.

INTERMENT AT FOREST LAWN

Rev. T. J. Mackay Pays Tribute to the High Ideals of Deceased—Many Friends and Associates at Funeral.

Many prominent business men, bankers, influential citizens and a host of friends of the late F. E. Sanborn attended the public funeral services at All Saints church, Twenty-sixth and Dewey avenue, yesterday morning.

The high esteem in which the deceased was held by his acquaintances and the business interests of the city was attested by huge banks of floral offerings, which completely covered the casket and also occupied the chancel of the church. The edifice was nearly filled with people who went to pay their final respects to the memory of the departed business man. Burial was in Forest Lawn cemetery and the service at the grave was a private one, conducted by Rev. Mr. Mackay.

Tribute to His Character. Rev. T. J. Mackay, rector of All Saints church, conducted the services and paid a high tribute to the character and manhood of the deceased. He said Mr. Sanborn's death recalled the aim of his life—the development of manhood and brotherhood.

"If our departed one were here today," said Rev. Mr. Mackay, "he would say to us: 'Be honest, be brave, be true; be loyal and loving to those near to you; be true to your family and friends, and to your business associates.'"

Continuing, Dr. Mackay said: "God grant that when we, too, die we may all leave behind us not only regret at our departure, but also rejoicing that we have gone from a Christian life on earth to eternal activity in the kingdom of God."

Pallbearers included some of Omaha's most prominent business men, who were close friends and associates of Mr. Sanborn throughout his successful business career here. They accompanied the body from the Jackson undertaking parlors to the church, and later to the grave. These men acted as pallbearers:

Mayor Dahlman Seeks Job of U. S. Marshal Open Soon

James C. Dahlman, the "cowboy" mayor of Omaha, is in Washington to confer with President Woodrow Wilson relative to having himself appointed United States marshal here to replace Marshal W. P. Warner. Before leaving Omaha the mayor said: "I'm going to see what I can do for myself and the boys. We rendered valuable service during the campaign, and thus far we have asked nothing of the administration."

Comenius School Celebrates Feast

Thanksgiving day was observed at Comenius night school by an impromptu program in which all took part. The pupils from the different rooms assembled in the lower hall around the piano and sang American and European national songs. Miss Julia Stenka, who was present as a visitor, accompanied them with the violin. She also played two violin solos that were greatly appreciated by all.

The Bohemian pupils of the school sang one of their national songs and this was followed by "Watch on the Rhine" in which all joined. The night schools are becoming social centers for many foreign young people. At this gathering of about 200 people, twelve different nationalities were represented, and at least nine different languages spoken. They come to the night schools to learn the English language. One has an opportunity here to meet intelligent young people from nearly every country of Europe and some countries of Asia. They are earnest, sympathetic and very appreciative of every thing that is done for them. But music is a universal language, and these people, each in his or her own way, sang "America" and "Star Spangled Banner" with an earnestness and enthusiasm that promises much for future citizenship.

Many Dinners Come by the Parcel Post

That the parcel post has become a considerable competitor of express companies was evidenced locally by the extent to which it was pressed into service in transporting turkeys and chickens for the Thanksgiving feast. In all, more than 500 of these were received at the Omaha postoffice and delivered before noon Thursday. Delivery men were busy up to a late hour Wednesday night; they thought they had disposed of the last of the turkeys and chickens. It was found Thursday morning, however, that 111 tardy fowls had been received. These were delivered in time for Thanksgiving dinner.

Forty-five boys are now enrolled in the Fort school and half a dozen others have applied for admission. Superintendent E. U. Graff, following a conference with Principal E. D.
