IN JACOBS MEMORIAL HALL

Two Institutions Are Well Equipped with Splendid Corps of Physicians and Surgeons—New Building Dedicated.

The aim of the University of Nebraska College of Medicine is as much to prevent disease as it is to cure it. In one part of the city a vast new building is preparing to turn out young doctors and physicians, while in another experienced physicians connected with the college investigate disease conditions and seek to prevent them.

The college is at Forty-second street and Dewey avenue. The University of Nebraska free medical dispensary is at 1718 Dodge street. The basement is well equipped with medical accessories and is divided into numerous rooms wherein various kinds of ailments and diseases may be treated.

Special stress is laid on the fact that the dispensary is making a careful study in the prevention of tuberculosis. Instructors are sent to the homes of patients of that disease and they instruct the family as to the urgent needs in each particular case.

The dispensary is divided into these departments: Medical, surgery, laboratory, skin diseases, pediatrics, gynecology and obstetrics, and the department for treating the eye, ear, nose and throat.

Many Treated Each Day.

The dispensary was opened to the public September 1. There have been from thirty to forty cases treated there each day. Drugs are sold at cost. The dispensary is in charge of Miss Lillian B. Huff, registered nurse.

Cases at the free dispensary will be supervised by some of the leading physicians in Omaha, as well as members of the alumni. They follow: Drs. Owen, R. B. Davis, Schalek, Jonas, W. O. Bridges, Alkin, Stokes, Somers, Milroy, Gifford, Lord, Poynter, Schultz, Findley, Summers, Crummer and McClanahan.

The officers of the University of Nebraska College of Medicine are Samuel Avery, chancellor; W. O. Bridges, dean, and Dr. Irving S. Cutter, secretary and director of the laboratories.

The department of physiology and pharmacology will be taught by Guenther, Mitchell and Meyer. Roy Sherrwood, a graduate from Drury college, is first assistant in the freshman class on the subject of normal histology, human embryology and neurology.

The department of pathology and bacteriology in equipment and personnel is entirely new. The department is in charge of Oscar T. Schultz, M. D., Johns Hopkins university, 1908, formerly associate professor of pathology in Western Reserve university and editor of the Cleveland Medical Journal. He is assisted by Aldis A. Johnson, M. D., Western Reserve university, 1912, former resident pathologist of the city hospital of Cleveland and demonstrator of pathology in Western Reserve university. In his work at the city hospital the latter had unusual opportunities for using and trying out the various newer laboratory methods which are of such extreme importance to clinical medicine.

The department of anatomy is in charge of Dr. C. W. M. Poynter.

Additions to Faculty.

The laboratory facility consists of seven full-time laboratory men. The new additions to the faculty this year on the clinical side of the work are: Dr. Leroy Crummer, professor of clinical medicine; Dr. John E. Summers, professor of clinical surgery; Dr. John P. Lord, professor of orthopedic surgery; Dr. E. I. Bridges, instructor in medicine, and Dr. W. N. Anderson, instructor in physical diagnosis. The new laboratory men joining the staff this year are: Dr. O. T. Schultz, in pathology and bacteriology; Dr. A. A. Johnson, in clinical pathology, and Dr. Claude Mitchell, assistant in physiology.

A great deal of good is expected from the two institutions, the college and the dispensary. Both are well supplied with top-notchers in teaching experience and resources. The dispensary is making a fruitful campaign on educating the people about tuberculosis. No charges are made for treatment or for information to the poor.

Fight Being Made for Lincoln Highway

Few towns along the Lincoln Highway between Omaha and Denver are more torn by discussion as to what streets the highway is to pass along than Columbus, Neb. Yes, the town was very glad to learn that it was so fortunate as to be on the route of the Lincoln Highway. But now that it is so fortunate as to have that point settled, the merchants are fighting among themselves as to who shall have the highway front of his door. H. E. Fredrickson says there are three or four positions in circulation in Columbus, ready to be presented to the state council of the highway with long strings of signatures asking that the route be here or there on some other street. "And the joke of it is," he says, "many names appear on two or more different petitions."

She declares, on the contrary, that she accepted him as a husband only after repeated requests by him that she do so and that he wooed her ardently.

Mr. Houston had alleged that she induced him to marry her when he was still suffering from the death of his first wife, who was killed in a street car accident.

INCONSPICUOUS BUT MIGHTY

Presbyterian Theological Seminary Doing Lots of Effective Work.

SUPPLIES COUNTRY PULPITS

Splendid Corps of Teachers Instruct the Prospective Clergymen in Studies to Be of Use in His Chosen Work.

Distinguished among Omaha's institutions of learning is the Presbyterian Theological seminary. The seminary is located in the northern part of the city in Kountze Place and consists of one large three-story building on a campus that covers an area of two square blocks. In time it is probable that more buildings will be erected on the campus and the size of the institution increased.

A theological seminary is not usually a familiar institution for the lay mind and there are few people in Omaha who realize just how big the Presbyterian seminary is. Seldom does a student enroll from Omaha, but the majority come from the other communities and as soon as they graduate, go elsewhere. Therefore many Omahans do not come in contact with the graduates and fail to realize that ministers of worthy caliber are graduated by the local seminary.

The curriculum at the Presbyterian seminary includes every course that is necessary for the ministry. The local seminary boasts of a Hebrew library that is extraordinarily complete. By means of this library students at the seminary are enabled to acquire what may be practically called first hand knowledge of the teachings of the early Hebrews.

necessarily a complicated subject, excepting, of course, in the fundamentals. The Bible is replete with intricate clauses requiring critical interpretations. Thus the student in the seminary is taught to simplify matters and make his sermons and teachings appeal to the practical mind of the people.

History is an important branch in the curriculum of the theological student. From a nonsectarian viewpoint he learns the history of the world and ever since the first accepted annals of government were written religion has always been as important a factor as the state. The student learns the unbiased outline of the world's history and he draws his own conclusions.

Some students reside in the dormitory floors of the seminary building, while others prefer to reside in private residences or boarding houses near the school. The large campus affords opportunity for recreation of every kind. A tennis court furnishes active amusement, while others use the foot ball field or base ball diamond of the campus, according to the season.

Omaha's seminary is past twenty years old, but the present building is comparatively new. The old site was the ancient Cousine hotel, on Ninth and Harney streets.

Members of the Faculty. The faculty of the seminary consists of five men. Dr. A. R. Marshall, being president with also some class room work, Dr. Daniel E. Jenkins, holds the leading chair, that of theology. Dr. Jenkins is one of the recognized theologians of the Presbyterian church. His prominence brought him the important position of chairman of the committee on polity at the last general assembly of the Presbyterian church in Atlanta. Some years ago, Dr. Jenkins delivered the "Stone" lectures at Princeton, an unusual honor. Dr. J. J. Lampe, who teaches Hebrew, is one of the oldest seminary professors. He has been prominent in church affairs, being brought into distinction years ago in certain councils in New York. Dr. Charles Heron is the teacher of missions and sacred history, and Dr. Charles Mitchell has English literature and some other branches.

The governing body is the board of trustees, composed largely of Omaha and Council Bluffs men, with some from out in the state and Iowa.

The seminary has some endowment and is seeking more.

Business Men Are Learning to Talk German at Lunch

A German conversational dinner club, organized among Omaha doctors and business men, meets regularly twice a week at the Young Men's Christian association building and conducts its entire conversation and business in German. The members have adopted the plan in order to become proficient in the language.

At present the members are making a specialty of discussing the German foods they eat, the cafe service and other related topics. They wish to be able to "get by" the German hotels and restaurants when they go abroad.

L. M. Whitehead, assistant general passenger agent of the Burlington route, has been elected president of the club. Rev. Oscar Auritt, 2005 North Twenty-sixth street, is chief Deutscher of the club and acts as instructor in smoothing over the snags encountered by the members in their linguistic efforts.

Rev. Mr. Auritt is pastor of the First German Baptist church and was born and educated in Germany. He founded the industrial school for foreigners at Winona, Minn., and is an enthusiastic advocate of the conversational method of teaching languages.

Besides the advanced conversational class in German, made up of physicians and business men who have some knowledge of the language, the Young Men's Christian association has several other similar classes for men and women.

THINKS WHITE HOUSE WOULD MAKE A GOOD CLUB HOUSE

Mayor James C. Dahman, who is visiting in Washington, in a letter to Thomas J. Flynn, president of the Dahman Democracy club, says he is negotiating for the east room of the White House for a club room for Dahman democracy. He said he found the room perfectly adapted to use for a headquarters for the Dahman club.
