Kansas Has Problem Similar to His and is Not Even Worrying.

STIEHM SAYS HE WILL STAY

Coach Announces that He Will Take His Chances with Nebraska—Annual to Hold Big Foot Ball Banquet Tonight.

LINCOLN, Dec. 4.—(Special.)—Kansas is facing a situation somewhat similar to Nebraska in the selection of Steuwe, the big backfield star, for next year's foot ball captain. Steuwe, like Towle, played an unofficial season of base ball and some of the critics for this reason have been inclined to criticize the eligibility of the new Kansas leader.

According to reports from Kansas, Steuwe played base ball in the season of 1912, the same year that Towle played, and the Jayhawkers, like Nebraska, had but three games scheduled, with no conference teams. But Kansas granted letters to the members of the Jayhawkers base ball team while the Nebraska athletic board did not, and took no official notice of the reorganized team.

At Kansas, however, the athletic board is not even worrying about Steuwe's eligibility, taking the view that the season was not an official season of sport. With the example of Kansas it is now extremely unlikely if Nebraska's eligibility committee will disqualify Towle for the season of base ball, which included only three games and these with secondary schools.

Stiehm Will Remain

At the banquet given the members of the Cornhusker team by Lincoln business men, Coach Stiehm announced his intention of remaining in Nebraska. To those familiar with the situation there was little question but what Stiehm would remain here. The Cornhusker mentor had offers from other schools more tempting financially than Nebraska, but the prospect was not so bright. Nebraska's standing in foot ball and other sports is high enough to insure prestige for the work of any man.

With the remarkable success which has attended Stiehm's work the last season there is no question but the Nebraska Athletic board will grant him a substantial increase.

The annual Cornhusker banquet will be held tomorrow night at the Lincoln hotel. An attendance of over 600 alumni and undergraduates is expected. Prof. H. W. Caldwell, one of the most loyal fans in the faculty, will preside. Chancellor Avery and five other speakers are on the toast list.

GONDING ALREADY ENGAGED BY ROURKE FOR NEXT YEAR

Old Johnny Goding is a Rourke again. He will be on the job when the 1914 training camp opens and stick for the big show during the season. Pa has already engaged his veteran catcher, who put in the last season in the Nebraska State league and with the Norfolk independent team.

Many old friends of the Omaha team wanted Pa to bring Goding back last season to whip some of his raw material, especially pitchers, into form, a work at which he has no superior. That and coaching and general counseling, possibly managing the team, will be his job the coming year or years, probably.

One of the wisest and readiest old heads that ever bobbed around the Western league is the one on Goding's shoulders, and everybody who has known the league since the late '80s knows that to be a fact. He ought to be a gold mine to Omaha in this capacity. It is but the principle big league are pursuing wherever possible of having an old catcher, who has been successful in his day, attached to the team to train youngsters, especially pitchers.

And one of their most serviceable spherics is coaching. Omaha lost many a game in 1913 by not coaching at all or the wrong kind. You think that will happen with "Noisy Jawa" around?

UNI OF OMAHA CO-EDS READY FOR BASKET BALL

Basket ball among the co-eds at the University of Omaha received its official start Tuesday afternoon when Miss Banhart, head of the physical department, for girls, urged all co-eds interested in this form of sport to come out for practice. The call for candidates brought out a number of prospective players Tuesday afternoon all eager for a chance to make the team so that a strong team will undoubtedly be put in the field by the girls.

Some time ago Miss May Leech was elected to manage the squad and Miss Gene Berger was elected captain. What success Miss Leech has had in arranging a schedule is not known, as she, as well as other candidates of the team, are rather reticent about giving out information. However, with the large number of high schools and colleges in the vicinity of Omaha it does not seem a hard proposition to fill out a schedule.

Gus Toman joined the select bunch with a 65 total. Gus is liable to throw one of these on the market any day.

The Standard Oil leaguers were going strong Monday night. One league record was broken and several 600 totals were registered.

Fred Balzer sure must have been off Tuesday night, when he only rolled 459. Fred's lack of practice accounts for his recent poor showing.

The Field club bunch did not come back very strong this week. They only rolled games of 71, 78, 83, totaling 2,34. This is about 500 plus short of their last week's total.

Charley Hough sure had his hook ball working for a while Monday night. It failed him in the last game, though. He dropped to 125 after rolling a couple 200 games.

The Chris Lycks were sure sailing along nicely in their series last night. With games of 1,016, 912 and 905, totaling 2,861, they won three from the Beacon Press.

Red Rucklin jumped in last night and pulled off a 111 game for the benefit of the gathering. Even at that his team won, after he, himself, had picked up a difficult pull.

Leo Byrne tried out a new pair of shoes Monday night and got good results. They didn't belong to him, but the chances are they will if he goes good the next time he wears them.

The Clara Belles pulled out with a win of 27, 22 and 27, total, 80. Their second game was the high one of the evening with 1,053. The Elks garnered the last one by rolling a good game of 960.

Bridge Adds Another Mystery to Long List

Once again the swirling, puffing, dant, dizzy, rushing, swooping, moaning waters of the treacherous puddy Missou, or that portion that is closest to the Douglas street bridge, breaks into print. The scene of many a mysterious disappearance, innumerable phony suicides and countless almost drownings was again the center of police activity last night when the authorities of Omaha and Council Bluffs investigated the story of C. C. Myers, 815 South Twentieth street, which was that he had seen a man and a woman struggling over the possession of a small bundle wrapped in a flannel shawl.

Myers says he was going to the Bluffs in his auto when he passed the couple. He notified the police on both sides of the river and subsequent investigation developed that the couple had walked across from Omaha, carrying a bundle which looked as if it might have contained a baby. When they returned, a few minutes later the woman, who was heavily veiled, was weeping silently and the bundle was missing.

Tollaker W. L. McClenahan, saw the couple and said he could identify them if he ever should see them again.

Captain Henry Heitfeld, who in the days of his sleuthhood investigated many a thrilling, mysterious tale of Omaha's Douglas street bridge, refuses to get wrought up over the story.
