THE early Christmas basars are showing novelties in Christmas gifts. Some ingenious women have been working for weeks on the beautiful gifts, nearly all of which are hand-made, for the church sales.

Among the "best sellers" at the All Saints' bazar yesterday were the dainty French and Dresden doll pin cushions. This novel doll is apparently just the daintiest and most exquisite-looking toy doll, but it is useful as well as ornamental, and the body of the doll is a pin cushion.

Another novelty which went like the proverbial "hot cakes" was the lace almond sets. These are made of Irish crochet in the form of a small, round dish for scall almonds. The border at the lower part of the dish is just the regular ecru, which is starched and forms the standard for the dish. These are easily laundered and very dainty, and not difficult to make if one is familiar with the ordinary crochet stitches.

CANNOT FORGIVE HUSBAND
Mrs. Rose Aier Peterson Declares She is Through with Him.
CHARGED WITH EMBEZZLEMENT
Missing Cigar Salesman is Said to Have Endorsed and Cashed Checks Belonging to His Employers.
"My husband's conduct with other women I have always forgiven, but I can never forgive him for stealing," said Mrs. Rose Aier Peterson, 704 South Seventeenth avenue, when informed that the arrest of her husband, Oscar C. Peterson, on charges of forgery and embezzlement by the Moshier Cigar company, was hourly expected by the police.
Peterson disappeared November 21, after kissing his wife goodbye at the breakfast table and saying he would be home for lunch. She has not seen him since that morning and the cigar firm for whom he traveled in Nebraska has also missed him since then.
"For fourteen years I have suspected that I did not possess my husband's affection," Mrs. Peterson said. "I bore my troubles in silence, although I believe he has had at least twenty-five women friends during our fifteen years of married life."
"But now that he is charged with taking his employer's money, I can no longer forgive him. If he is arrested and sent to prison I shall seek a divorce on those grounds, rather than because of his relations with other women."
When his employers checked up Peterson's accounts of collections he had made, it is said they found that he was short over $1,000 and had secured the money by forging the firm's endorsement to checks he had collected from customers and cashing them without authority or making an accounting.

Covered Up His "Tracks."
Chief of Detectives Steve Maloney, Detective Devereuse, in charge of the case, and Harry Koch of the company which bonded Peterson, are disgusted with the way they have been delayed in their search for Peterson by alleged efforts of the man's friends, to cover up his tracks. One of these occurred the other day in the Moshier Cigar company's store at Thirteenth and Farnam streets.
"When did Peterson leave?" a customer, said to be named Wahlgren, is reported to have asked Fred C. Rogers, a salesman.
"November 21," answered Rogers.
"By George, that's the very day my wife went away and left me," the customer replied, thereby starting the police to work on what they now declare to have been a false clue designed to mislead them.
"But we expect to have him in custody very soon now," the officers declare. They have had warrants out for his arrest for several days. Max Moshier of the cigar company, being the complainant, Peterson was always trusted by Mr. Moshier, who never expected that the man would get into trouble.
Some years ago the salesman, who is 41 years of age, ran for councilman from the Tenth ward, but was defeated. At that time he ran a cigar store at Sixteenth and Leavenworth street and had many friends and acquaintances.
His wife has conducted a rooming house for a number of years, and admits she has done so to insure herself of a living.
