A root-soaking rain was general all Monday afternoon and night over Nebraska, western Iowa, South Dakota and Kansas, the precipitation ranging from one to six inches, it being the most general and heaviest of the season. At many places it was still raining when reports came in yesterday morning.
By reason of the heavy rain and the softened condition of the ground, trains are running late, but no serious damage has been done along the lines except south of Manila, Ia., where the Milwaukee grade, washed out several days ago and just rebuilt, was badly cut and washed.
Northern Kansas apparently got the heaviest of Monday's rain; reports coming from Marysville, Concordia and several places along the Republican river say that the precipitation was five to six inches and still raining.
All along both the high and the low lines of the Burlington, from McCook to as far as Holdrege, the rainfall was from two to three inches, with three and one-half inches down the Blue river valley, where streams went out of their banks, wagon bridges were swept away and fields and pastures inundated.
On Northwestern Lines.
In Nebraska the Northwestern had from one to three inches of rain all up through the Elkhorn valley, down on the Hastings and Superior lines and out along the mail line all the way from Fremont to Chadron, a distance of about 40 miles. The rain was general over the Verdigris, Bonesteel and Winter branches up into South Dakota, where the precipitation was about the same as along the main line.
East of the river, railroad men bringing in trains said that the low lands everywhere in Iowa seemed to be under water

Court Approves Expenditures by Mrs. Paul for Son

Mrs. Nellie Paul, voluntarily appeared in county court yesterday and gave an accounting of $8,000 which she had spent out of the $20,000 received as guardian for her son, Clarence Risley. Of this $8,000 has been paid a local lawyer. She then requested the court to approve the expenditure; to grant her an allowance of $2,500 per year; to set aside $500 for a trip to California in the interest of her son's health and that $20,000 should be invested in shares of responsible Omaha corporations.
All this the court agreed to and the case is for the present closed.

WITNESS DID NOT KNOW THE COUNTY OMAHA IS IN
A Nebraska man who did not know that Omaha is in Douglas county appeared in the second trial of William L. Burke for the killing of Forbes Robertson. He was George Williamson, now of Nebraska City, but who was employed by the Expressman's delivery company in this city when Robertson died in 1911.
Williamson testified about the blow which Burke struck Robertson. He was asked as to the location of Burke's saloon at Tenth and Davenport streets. "In Otoe county," he answered. His next guess was Cass county. He was informed that Douglas county was the correct answer. Williamson was the second witness who testified for the prosecution. He said Robertson approached Burke and said something to him and that Burke struck him with his fist; then that two men whom he did not know dragged him into the weeds in a lot near there. Williamson was standing nearby on the corner.
Dr. McClanahan, who, as police surgeon, attended Robertson, said the man had a three and one-half inch fracture of the skull and that his lip was cut.
The jury is composed of the following: A. M. Oliver, Tom Martin, John Thorne, E. E. Shell, A. M. Quasley, J. C. Klaus, James Engelthaler, J. C. Edmonds, Ed Rossler, James Maguire, P. J. Ryan and A. J. Hyland.
