JOINT PEACE CELEBRATION
 British Vice Consul Hall Gets Word of the Centennial.

COMMEMORATES GHENT TREATY
 In Fall of Next Year It Will Be a Hundred Years Since Signing of Official Document of Agreement.

Matthew A. Hall, British vice consul in Omaha, has received a number of circulars on the Anglo-American exposition to be held in London in 1914 to commemorate the 100 years of peace between the United States and Great Britain.

He has given a few of them to the various publications in Omaha and will give the rest to J. M. Guild, commissioner of the Omaha Commercial club, to be distributed where they will do the most good. It is likely that some steps will be taken toward getting an exhibit from Nebraska for the big exposition. Mr. Hall says he has no official word or orders in regard to any activities for the exposition. The director general of the exposition, Imre Kiraly, is now in Washington conferring with American officials with regard to the coming exposition.

Object of Celebration.
 In the introduction, the circular says: "The object of the Anglo-American exposition is to celebrate in a fitting manner the 100 years of peace and progress between the English-speaking peoples since the treaty of Ghent in 1814. What more appropriate means could be adopted to commemorate these epoch-making events than to materialize in a magnificent joint display the vast gains which have accrued to mankind through this peaceful development of Great Britain and the United States of America during the last century? The exposition will be held at Shepherd's Bush, London, between May and October of 1914, and will demonstrate in a practical manner the progress which has been made by the British and American people in every branch of civilization during that century, and will place on view in chronological order the great achievements of that epoch—from inception to perfection—showing not only how each nation has improved on its own inventions, but also where both have worked hand in hand to perfect the creation of the other.

"Thus there will be unfolded the rich treasures of a hundred years of British and American art.

"A hundred years of the history of the two nations—their famous statesmen, authors, artists, inventors, philanthropists, financiers, merchants, manufacturers, and others. Men and women who have helped in the advancement of civilization and in making each nation what it is today, will be represented with such objects of historical interest as are associated with them and their times."

ASKS HEAVY DAMAGES FROM THE STREET CAR COMPANY

Helen Roggen, South Omaha, has filed a suit against the street railway company for $25,000 damages.

She alleges that on December 21, 1912, while a passenger on a street car, which she boarded at Twenty-fourth and Ames avenue, she sustained injuries when it reached Fifteenth and Howard streets, which have resulted in her suffering from an attack of neuritis. She asserts that she was holding on to a strap in the car when it collided with another car and that she was thrown from her position with violent force.

COMMISSION HEARS CASES
 Interstate Commerce Examiner Henderson Takes Testimony.

INVOLVES SOUTHERN SHIPMENTS
 Lumber Rates from Yellow Pine Districts to Omaha and Ralston Come Up for Examination.

Five cases have been threshed over in Omaha at the hearing before Special Examiner Henderson of the Interstate Commerce commission in the last few days. They concern rates from the southeastern territory of the United States to Omaha and neighboring cities and towns. The testimony will be presented in transcript to the Interstate Commerce commission at Washington, where decisions of the cases will be reached.

The case of the H. F. Cady Lumber company against the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railroad company and other lumber carrying roads involves the rate on lumber from the entire producing section of the south to Ralston. Ralston has the Omaha rate on practically everything except lumber. The plaintiff claims that the Omaha rate should apply to lumber as well as other products, and asks the commission to establish the Omaha rate at Ralston and award the Cady Lumber company reparation for the difference between the rate of 25 cents per 100 pounds and the rate of 35 cents per 100 pounds collected by the railway companies.

Another case considered was that of the Omaha Coopersage company versus the Illinois Central Railway company. It involves the rate on staves heading from certain points in Mississippi to Omaha and South Omaha. The roads charge the coopersage company 27 cents per hundred weight, while the company claims the rate should have been but 23 cents. A compromise was reached on the basis of 25 cents per hundred pounds and the case was settled without trial.

A number of other cases involving alleged over charges for freight on lumber from southern territory to points in Nebraska were taken up.

Library Class in Civil Government Closes Till Fall

Thursday of this week closes the work for the class in "Civil Government" conducted by the Omaha public library. At the meeting of the library board held May 21 a report of the work was presented by the director and instructor of the class, some extracts from which are as follows:

"The year's work with the library class in civil government will close with the present month, and will have been more or less successful; at least, a beginning has been made.

"Altogether, perhaps, thirty men have been enrolled during the year. The attendance has been somewhat irregular, due to the fact that we have here a shifting population; some of the men have left the city, others are often obliged to work in the evening. A new phase of the work has opened up, since the closing of the night schools in the way of a class of foreign-born men, who are preparing to take the second examination for naturalization.

"To this class of coming citizens the work will be most beneficial, and to a class in civil government a new and most promising field of activity may be opened. These men are in earnest, are very anxious to profit by everything offered them, and appreciate to a degree the opportunity given them by the public library.

"It is most unfortunate that the native-born citizens are not subjected to the rigid tests confronting these men, before being granted the right of franchise. The library classwork has a future. As soon as the people realize that other city libraries in general and this library in particular are doing this kind of work the thing is established; but it must grow legitimately."

This class will begin work again in the fall immediately following the close of the Ak-Sar-Ben festivities and will be open to all men who wish to join.

FINED FOR THREATENING WIFE WITH EMPTY GUN

E. Clifford, 264 Harney street, was fined $15 and costs in police court for threatening his wife with an empty revolver when she stated her intention of leaving him. The gun was confiscated by the court.
