Connraskers Do Not Ask for Place Among Big Nine

MADISON, Wis., June 7.—No formal application was made by the University of Nebraska for admission into the Western Intercollegiate conference, as was reported last night, but it was said today that the Connraskers would be members of a new association which it is proposed to establish among the institutions of Nebraska's neighbors. Coach Steinhilber of the Nebraska athletic department said his people were anxious to learn as much as possible about the way the western conference is run, but that there was no desire on the part of his school to join the "Big Nine."

Leading arguments against the admission of Nebraska include that based on geographical reasons and that brought forward by those who think any increase in the size of the coalition would make it unwieldy.

Bars are gradually being let down by the conference managers anyway, it was argued today, so that outside institutions will have more chance for competition. The reconstituted of the rule requiring each conference football team to play at least four games with other conference schools was cited as an instance of this tendency.

Football officials for next fall were selected today at a meeting of coaches and others, but a list will not be announced at least until it is known how many can accept the places.
