His Play Not Nearly as Good as it His Previous Games in England-Britons Win in Doubles.

WIMBLEDON, July 4 .- A. F. Wilding of New Zealand, holder of the title of all-England singles lawn tennis champions since 1910, retained the championship today by beating Maurice E. Me-Loughlin of San Francisco, national lawn tennis champion of the United States by three straight sets, 8-5, 6-3, 10-8. where the Philadelphia brigade stood that his life. His first service many times resulted in a fault. Wilding, on the other hand, was at the top if his form. When the two opponents faced each physical disparity between them was at once evident. Wilding is a grown, broad shouldered man beside whom Mc-Loughlin looked like a boy.

The New Zealander was at first much worried by the American's service, but as the match progressed, he became more accustomed to it and standing at the back line returned it with pre-a lead of two games to love by splendid base line shots, but Wilding winning his oppoent's service drew level at 2 all. Desome double faults and a foot fault McLoughlin gained a lead of 4 to 2 and 5 to 3, but he then netted a number of balls, allowing Wilding, who was driving and placing well, to equalize at 5 all. The New Zealander took the next game on his service after deuce had been called. Then the American retaliated with some magnificent short chops from the net. Some beautiful railies followed, but Wilding was passing the American frequently and winning his own service, while he almost as easily took Mc-Loughlin's.

McLoughlin Tires Easy. McLoughlin appeared a little when the second set was called, while Wilding, who has the reputation of being able to play all day without turning a hair, was as fresh as ever. He took Mc-Loughlin's service with comfort and after some brisk net play secured a lead of third game off Wilding's service, Loughlin lost the fourth, his short rallles finding the net price and Wilding serving strongly, increased his lead to 4 to 1. The American then won his service, his two service balls entirely beating Wilding, but he could not maintain the spurt and Wilding with some fine passing drives brought his lead to

Ahead of them marched a band and well down the column was a faded Confederate flag, its red field pierced with many holes, its cross bars dim and its man who died that it might fly high in In the first set McLoughlin established the last desperate effort to pierce the Union lines. Its progress was slow and painful, for the timothy in the field was high and its plowed surface was not easy for world-weary feet. Up to the very edge of the stone wall, covered now with tangled vines, shaded by trees and peaceful as a summer lane, they marched in the hot sun while the band played "Dixie." There they stood for half an hour while their comrades in blue peered across at them.

The blue line formed behind the walls Over their heads floated a faded standard of the Second army corps. Behind them were the statues of the Philadelphia brigade and the Fourth United States battery, where General Armstead died in the midst of the guns, killed, the histories say, by a shot fired by its dying commander, Lieutenant Cushing.
