IV. Our Home Rule Charter-Responsibility What is in it—what is not in it—what it means.

The present commission plan of city government in Omaha centers responsibility for the administration of city affairs in the council, which consists of seven members, each of whom is assigned to the supervision of one department.

The new home rule charter goes one step further in fixing individual reaponsibility for the work of each department upon its head, who will appoint all subordinates with the exception of a few positions, such as the city clerk, city attorney, corporation counsel and city engineer, who have to do with several or all departments, and who will continue to be comreissioned by the whole council.

Direct responsibility of the executive head of each department is fast becoming the generally accepted practice in all up-to-date city governments. When this responsibility is divided by resting upon a body of seven commissioners it is easy for the head man to say when complaint is

"I would like to correct that abuse. But all I can do is to refer it to the council."

To delay and shift responsibility is a too easy excuse; so the proposed home rule charter makes the head of each department appoint all subordinates, makes them accountable to him and him accountable for them, and permits him to remove them, subject, of course, to their civil service standing and right of appeal, not to the been who fires or disciplines them, but to the civil service commission under oath to give them a fair trial and a

One horse was dead, stabbed to the heart a sister, Mrs. Sam Warrich, his brother, as it was struck, and to this fact owed itsalive. The affair is very much of a mystery, as Mrs. Vanderhule, who is very highly esteemed, has no suspicion of anyone as a possible guilty party.
