

ROYAL NEIGHBORS TO MEET

Some 400 Delegates Expected for Triennial Convention.
SESSIONS TO START TUESDAY
Effort Will Be Made to Have Supreme Officer Elected from Nebraska to Supervise Work in This Territory.

Fully 400 women delegates are expected in Omaha this week to attend the triennial state camp meeting of the Royal Neighbors of America which will be held at the Henshaw hotel March 17 to 19 inclusive. There are 413 delegates elected, and a number of boosters are also expected. A special car is to arrive from Grand Island on the Union Pacific Tuesday afternoon with a load of delegates. Another is expected from Broken Bow the same afternoon, picking up the delegates from the Burlington lines in western Nebraska. A train from Chadron the same day is to bring in the delegates from all along the Chicago & Northwestern line through northern Nebraska. A large delegation with a good flock of boosters is expected from Lincoln also.

An informal reception is to be held Tuesday evening at the Henshaw hotel when all the delegates are to be received by the state officers, some of the supreme officers, and the local committee. The state officers are Mrs. Jennie Kirkpatrick of Kearney, state orator; Mrs. Hattie Carson, Lincoln, state recorder; Mrs. A. K. Stevenson, Broken Bow, state supervisor; and Mrs. Josephine Stansffer, Lincoln, state deputy.

Another matter of importance to come up is the proposition of getting a supreme office in Nebraska. Every large state has one or more supreme offices of this order, but Nebraska has none. Illinois for example has eight such offices. This office is filled by one known as the supreme recorder. Mrs. A. K. Stevenson of Broken Bow, present state supervisor in Nebraska, is a candidate for the place as supreme recorder in case a supreme office is granted at the triennial Wednesday. The delegates are to have luncheon together at the cafe of the Henshaw, and in the evening at the Swedish auditorium they are to initiate a class of 100 candidates gathered by the ten camps of Omaha.

FAMOUS OLD CHURCH AT NEUSS IS BURNED

DUESSELDORF, Germany, March 14.—The famous Thirteenth Century church of St. Quirinus at Neuss, four miles from here, burst into flames at 5 o'clock this morning and the greater part of the edifice was quickly destroyed.

At noon the tower, the celebrated chimneys and the organ had gone and the flames were still making headway in spite of the efforts of firemen from this city and from Cologne.

St. Quirinus was begun in the year 1299. The tower, which collapsed today, was reconstructed in 1741.

Eight-Room Square House

The house illustrated above is more attractive than the average square house, because it is built more along architectural lines than the average square house.

The main body of the building is 20x23, with an addition in the rear for the pantry and entry, also a nine-foot porch extending across the front of the house.

The exterior is of narrow siding, with mitered corners. The foundation and chimney are of Hy-Tex brick, laid in colored mortar.

One enters the house by a small vestibule, off the porch, and into a large reception room. To the left as you enter there is a small closet for wraps, and to the right a pedestal opening leads to the living room, with its massive fireplace and built-in seats.

A sliding door separates this room from the dining room, which is a large room with a bay window on the south and three large windows on the east looking out over the bins. The dining room walls are paneled, and a neat plate rail extends around the entire room about five and one-half feet high. A double-acting door leads to the kitchen, which is large and well arranged. The pantry and refrigerator room are directly off the kitchen; a stairway leads to the main stair, and another stairs leads down to the grade door and basement.

In the reception hall an open stair of attractive design leads to the second floor on which are four good sized bedrooms, a sleeping porch and bath, all arranged around a small hall and well supplied with good clothes closets.

As a whole the exterior and interior are entirely harmonious and the plan shows not only a most economical handling of space, but it is also well adapted to the average family where four bedrooms are sufficient to meet their requirements.

The above design is from the office of Everett S. Dodds, architect.

Any one desiring further information relative to the above plan or the designing of a new home should write or call on the architect, who will be glad to render his services. My plan book will be ready soon. EVERETT S. DODDS,

Howell was not as much as was needed. "We ought to have all we need," said one man.

"That land can never be used for a reservoir," said J. H. Dumont, "and Howell knows it."

Trust Companies Good Executors for the Women

As a rule the woman who finds herself bereft of a husband's protection, knows little of the intricacies of the administration of estates, the care of titles to real estate left to her, of securities including bonds and stocks and mortgages. She is peculiarly liable to deception and to fraud. When such property is left in trust to an individual some personal or confidential "friend of the family" or the attorney, there comes the danger that such trustee or administrator may yield to temptation, speculate with funds in his control, manage property for his own interests and make false statements of receipts and expenditures. There is also the possibility of endless litigation where a counsel is enabled to pile up fees to his credit. The probate, civil and criminal courts are congested with litigation involving the betrayal of trusts by individual trustees, executors, guardians and administrators, where property or estates have been left to widows and orphans.

Presumably the beneficiaries accept acquiescence without question, have no suspicion of wrongful use of their funds and make no request for court accounting until all the funds of the estate are stolen or wasted. Nor is there any guarantee that such individual fiduciaries are competent, able to select sound investments or preserve the value of the property, because there is no one to question his methods. The daily newspapers contain accounts almost daily of tragic sequels of betrayal of trusts where women and children are deprived of all their earthly possessions because of their helplessness and innocence in financial matters.

But the trust company is of greatest service to women not only in detecting and preventing such frauds, but in safely managing the property and sources of income of an estate where it is appointed executor or trustee under the will. It is this assurance of safety which accounts for the fact that the custom is growing of having trust companies appointed to later estates left to widows and children.
