BOURBONS HIGHLY INDIGNANT

Thomas Rips Jones, Saying
Members Should Make Such Charges Against the Executive Directly.

WASHINGTON, March 25.—"If Andrew Carnegie, who continually asserts the cause of Great Britain, were the citizen of any other nation, he would be charged with treason," declared Senator Chamberlain today, in the course of the Panama canal debate. "He has never hesitated to spend his millions in endeavoring to inculcate a reciprocal feeling for Great Britain in the minds of the people of the United States."
Mr. Chamberlain's attack on Mr. Carnegie came as the climax to an hour of hot argument, during which Senator Jones, who also opposed a repeal of the toll exemption, had read, under protest, several letters attacking the content of President Wilson's bill.

The debate was cut off when the subject went over to tomorrow under parliamentary procedure.
Senator Jones had read a letter from William B. Markin of 20 Highland street, Boston, assailing President Wilson's contention and saying: "The president should be recalled to the classic shades of Princeton instead of being permitted to continue to bulldoze accredited representatives of the American people in congress."
Senator Hoke Smith, Senator Lewis and other democrats failed by various parliamentary tactics to prevent the reading of the letter.

Senator Thomas, democrat, interrupted the reading of similar letters to ask Mr. Jones' opinion of the president's motives in urging repeal.
"I believe, the president to be acting honestly and in accordance with his best judgment," said Senator Jones. "I am simply reading these letters to show the feeling and indignation among the ordinary people of the country."
Thomas protests against the reading of letters impugning the motives of the president. He declared senators should make such charges directly.

Senator Thomas criticized Senator Jones as detracting from the dignity of the senate by reading letters that almost charged the president with treason. Senator Jones responded he was not criticising the president, but believed the respondents had grasped the idea that the people and congress should repeal free tolls.
"Should foreign relations justify the course, I am sure congress will support the president, irrespective of party, but it is entitled to know the reason on which it acts," replied Senator Jones.

Thornton's Contented.
Senator Thornton contended that the Markin letter was improper and should not have been received by the senate.
The incident of the letters ended with Senator Chamberlain taking up his resolution to repeal the provision of the river and harbor bill of 1894, which forbids the levying of tolls on inland waterways. He repeated his charge that the "insidious influences" behind the Panama canal repeal were the Canadian Pacific and other transcontinental railroads, but he admitted that he did not mean to impute to the president what he was actuated by those influences. He referred to the president as a "thoroughly patriotic gentleman, who believes in whatever he does and that he is doing it for the best interests of the country."

Seidel and Bading Named in Milwaukee
MILWAUKEE, Wis., March 25.—Mayor Bading, nonpartisan, and Emil Seidel, socialist, were nominated for mayor at today's primary and will figure in the municipal contest for chief executive of Milwaukee on April 7.
Seidel led the field with 20,664 votes, against Bading 17,020. Former Mayor David S. Rose ran third with 17,511 and Theobald Otten last with 2,675. All but Seidel were on the non-partisan tickets.
Indications are that the socialists nominated six aldermen at large, they being carried along with the vote of Seidel.
Yesterday's primary was the first non-partisan contest ever held in Milwaukee.
While Seidel polled more than 21,000 votes yesterday, against 17,000 at the primary of two years ago, he received some 30,000 when elected mayor four years ago.

Most of his works were written in the provençal dialect. His best known poem was "Mireille," written in 1859.

THOMPSON TO BE CANDIDATE

Slated to Fall Heir to Support of Morehead for Governor.

EXECUTIVE OUT FOR CONGRESS

Lets it Be Known He Will Not Make Race for Renomination—
Food Commissioner to Run for Congress.

(From a Staff Correspondent.)
LINCOLN, Neb., March 25.—(Special.)—Governor Morehead will not be a candidate for renomination for the governorship on the democratic ticket this fall. This is the information given by the executive to John Zink of Grand Island this morning, according to that gentleman. This means that Congressman Johnson Maguire will have to look to his laurels for the governor will make the attempt to crowd little Johnny off the democratic race course in an effort to land the first congressional nomination on the democratic ticket.
In order that the stalwart democrats of the state will be in the fight for his nomination, according to Mr. Zink, democracy's little giant, the pride of Grand Island, W. H. Thompson, will inherit the support that would have been given to the governor if he would have consented to run, and notwithstanding Mr. Thompson has run many times and failed to reach the goal, he is so used to running that the stalwarts believe that he can make Brother Charlie Bryan or Mr. Berge hunt their holes.
Harman in the Fifth.
On top of this, after a conference with Clarence Harman in the office of the latter, Mr. Zink left that official feeling exceedingly good for the food commissioner had promised that he would announce his name for the Fifth district nomination for congress on the democratic ticket before the week is out, all of which goes to show that Mr. Zink can do something else besides make cigars or pass laws regulating the size of bed sheets to nine feet long.
In coming to Lincoln and pulling off such a stunt has been demonstrated that the democratic party of Nebraska has a new leader in Mr. Zink. Time after time have very close friends of Governor Morehead and leading democratic politicians and statesmen used every persuasion to get the governor to come out and fight his first in either the governorship ring or the congressional ring, but to no avail. However, Mr. Zink comes to town, and after a short conference with the governor, presto, announcement is made that the executive has made up his mind not to run for governor.
Food Commissioner Out.
Then Mr. Zink slips up to the office of the governor's appointee who has long been considering whether he would file for the Fifth district nomination for congress on the democratic ticket and, presto, again, out comes the food commissioner for the nomination. Then Mr. Zink makes a few more mysterious passes in the air, mutters a few magic words, and, presto, a third time out of the democratic hat jumps W. H. Thompson for governor.
If there is any further evidence needed that the democratic party has found its Moses it will probably be shown in a few days when Andrew Morrissey will go back to Alliance and run for congress in the Sixth and it ought not to be hard work for Mr. Zink to hunt up someone to file in the Fourth, Third and second districts. In fact, the easy way to democratic nomination has been solved by democracy's new magician, John W. Zink of Grand Island.

SAY JUSTICE IS DEFEATED

Attorneys for Ralph Moss Amend Motion for New Hearing.

PLAINTIFF SHOULD HAVE DAY

Assert that Decision Was Made on Facts in the Case, When Judge
Did Not Hear Facts from Witnesses.

That the decision of District Judge English that 7-year-old Ralph Moss, whose leg was crushed by a Missouri Pacific train and was twice amputated may not sue the railroad for damages because his father was paid $1,000 to dismiss his suit, defeats the rights of substantial justice, is an allegation made in an amended motion for a new hearing filed by the father's attorneys, M. L. Donovan and T. A. Donohoe.
They are fighting to secure for Ralph his right to a trial of his case by a jury, which is called by lawyers his right to "his day in court." A large part of the $1,000 already has been spent for expenses, while Ralph has received no money for his injury in his own name and as yet has no artificial limb, but is compelled to hobble to and from school on crutches.
As grounds for the assertion that the ends of justice were defeated by Judge English's decision sustaining the settlement of the railroad's lawyer, J. A. C. Kennedy, with Ralph's father, the following allegations are made:
To have sustained plaintiff's motion could not have prejudiced the rights of the railroad company, as it would only have given plaintiff his day in court and his constitutional right to a trial by jury.
By overruling said motion plaintiff's only recourse is an appeal to the supreme court, which will require plaintiff to wait at least two years for a decision.
Defeat Plaintiff's Rights.
Should the supreme court sustain plaintiff's contention it would nevertheless mean only the defeat of plaintiff's rights, as the whereabouts of the witness two years hence will undoubtedly be unknown, that the physical facts relied upon by plaintiff to prove the negligence of the railroad company and which contributed to plaintiff's injury will be changed and perhaps entirely removed.
All costs of appeal must be advanced by plaintiff, whether plaintiff's contention is right or wrong, whereas to sustain said motion and set aside the company's verdict would not be prejudicial to payment of costs, unless found liable for plaintiff's injuries.

It is also alleged in the last legal move made in Ralph's behalf that Judge English erred in making a finding on the facts in passing on a motion, and that he declined to call witnesses into court to question them as to the facts. It is alleged that the testimony of the brakeman who pulled Ralph from beneath the car and of other trainmen and of a number of boys who saw the accident, including one lad who picked up a piece of bone from Ralph's leg, was available if the judge had consented to hear it.
One allegation says that the court erred in finding that Ralph's "adjustment" with the railroad company's lawyer was "fair and reasonable" when there was no evidence that the boy himself had in fact received anything.

MORE LIGHT ON ARMY AFFAIRS

Officers Were Given Written Guar-

Ulster Army.

LONDON, March 25.—Colonel John Seeley today resigned his portfolio as secretary of state for war in the British cabinet.
The resignation of Colonel Seeley followed quickly after the publication today of the White Paper giving details of the crisis in the British army, whose officers refused to participate in active operations against the inhabitants of Ulster, who had prepared to offer armed resistance to the introduction of home rule.
Colonel Seeley in his valedictory address to the House of Commons, denied that King George had taken any initiative of any kind in the army crisis. He said:
"The suggestion is absolutely without foundation in the broadest sense. His majesty took no initiative of any kind."
The correspondence between Colonel Seeley and the officers in Ireland had astounded the country and in the opinion of seasoned politicians demanded one of two courses—the cashiering of the secretary of war, or the resignation of the secretary of war. The first course was decided on at a protracted cabinet council early this morning. Later in the day in the House of Commons, Premier Asquith in reply to a question made it clear that the instructions given to General Sir Arthur Paget before his interview with the officer under him had emanated directly from the War office and were not submitted to the prime minister by the secretary of war.
Premier Asquith refused today to accept Colonel Seeley's resignation.
After the sympathetic reception by the House of Commons of the secretary for war's explanation of his action regarding the army officers in Ireland, the premier decided that he would not sacrifice his lieutenant.

Beresford Heckles Churchill.
The House of Commons buzzed with excitement and was crowded to the utmost capacity when Lord Charles Beresford opened the attack on the government by demanding information as to the naval movements in connection with the situation in Ulster.
"Was the battle squadron ordered to steam at full speed from Spanish waters to the Irish coast and ordered to embark field guns?" he asked.
A mid ministerial cheer and derisive laughter from the unionists, Winston Spencer Churchill, first lord of the admiralty, admitted that the battle squadron had been ordered to be in proximity to the coast of Ireland in case of serious disturbances arising. When it was clear that the military preparations were being made without delay, he decided that he would not sacrifice his lieutenant.

The statement of the first lord was immediately followed by a cyclone of questions. A unionist member asked if Mr. Churchill expected that "this precautionary movement of troops would lead to fighting."
In a moment the first lord flared up. "I repudiate the hellish suggestion," he shouted.
When the consequent uproar had subsided, the speaker reprised Mr. Churchill, saying that such an expression should not have been used. The first lord respectfully withdrew it and the storm passed off as quickly as it had arisen.
