ALLEGED HOLDUPS INDICTED

Men Accused of Robbing Women Must Stand Trial.

FOUR WOMEN IDENTIFY THEM

All Who Appear Before Grand Jury Signify Certainty that They Are Ones Who Compelled Them to Deliver Property.

The grand jury completed its work yesterday and adjourned until May 25. Eight indictments were returned, involving about a dozen men. Only three of the indictments were made public. Indictments were refused upon a number of cases presented, including cases where the inquiry was not finished.

The case that perhaps presents the greatest public interest was the indictment of Fred Evans and Andy Maxwell, the two young men identified by four of the six women who were held up and robbed on Saturday night, March 14.

Two double indictments were returned against them upon the complaints of Mrs. Myrtle Land, Miss Elizabeth O'Leary and her younger sister and Mrs. Ida Woodward.

Before the grand jury the women swore they positively identified Evans and Maxwell as the young men who had intimidated them by thrusting a revolver in their faces and who compelled them to give money and jewelry. Mrs. Land testified to the loss of $20 in cash, a diamond ring worth $25 and a signet ring worth $5. Miss O'Leary told the grand jury the men had taken from her a string of rosary beads, her eyeglasses and 9 cents in money, all amounting to $10 in value. All of the women spoke of the indignities to which they were subjected and the fear of death or injury from the reckless use of the revolver. The bond in each indictment was fixed at $2,000. The young men are 23 years old and have no friends here.

The only other indictment made public was returned against Frank Evans, a hobo, who was caught in the act of breaking into a tool house belonging to the Illinois Central railroad and located near the corner of Avenue C and Thirteenth street. He is charged with breaking and entering. The act was committed March 5.

No bills were returned in the cases of Charles Spaney, arrested upon the charge of attempting to entice from her home a 15-year-old girl; Harry Spross, arrested for threatening to kill, and Charles Alitto, accused of larceny.

Hog Cholera and Its Treatment

SERIES OF ARTICLES

BEGINS APRIL 18

IN THE

Twentieth Century Farmer

THE swine industry is one of the greatest industries in the corn belt—if not the greatest. The matter uppermost in the minds of hog growers at the present time is hog cholera. Until recently hog cholera has been a disease that science was unable to combat. The government has spent thousands upon thousands of dollars experimenting with cures for this scourge.

THE TWENTIETH CENTURY FARMER believes that knowledge of results obtained from treatments for this disease is of vital importance to hog growers. To best obtain this knowledge for the use of our readers, we secured the services of a practical hog man—a man who has been for twenty-five years a breeder and raiser of hogs. This investigation has taken him into Iowa, Missouri, Nebraska, Kansas and Texas. Careful inquiry has been made from all classes of men engaged in the work—state veterinarians, college veterinarians, veterinarians practicing in the field, farmers who have had the disease in their herds and have had actual experience in combatting it, and manufacturers of serum, both state and commercial.

THIS FIRST-HAND INFORMATION has now been compiled and will be given our readers in a series of articles which will begin in the next issue. We know the information we have gathered in this way will be of material benefit to hog raisers.

SAMPLE copies containing these articles will be sent on request. Address

River He Wrote Verse About Gets Aged Poet

KANSAS CITY, Mo., March 27.—Andrew Jackson Sheridan, regarded as an eccentric man of genius in the river front district of Kansas City, Kan., was drowned today, his friends believe, in the Kansas river, a stream he often had memorialized in verse.

Sheridan, who was 74 years old and reputed wealthy, lived in a concrete house he, himself, constructed on the bank of the river. For years he had edited a magazine, which, as the editorial page set forth, was "devoted to poetry and to health" and "published occasionally."

On starting out on the river last night he said to a friend: "If I drown you get all my property." Sheridan owned dozens of houseboats and river bank shacks which he rented to poor persons at low rates.

SIoux CITY TAKES KANE AT THE WAIVER PRICE

Jim Kane, for four years first baseman for Omaha, has gone to Sioux City at the waiver price.
Pa. Rourke concluded that, though Jim had rendered some grand service in this city, a change would be best. Kane will join the Sioux at Tulsa, Okla., where they are in training.

Jim is one of the ball players who developed in Omaha against the tide of prejudice. He came here from Pittsburgh and almost at once fell under the ban of many fans, who took keen umbrage at his way of fielding ground balls. This was his weakness, but he had many strong points to counteract this. He became fast on the bases, the best batter in the league and one of the most reliable hitters. Many and many a game old Jim has put on ice for the team. Until last year he always hit well above .300, and finished 1912 only a slight margin below that coveted figure. There is no reason why he should not give several seasons of good service to Sioux City, or any other teams that get him.
