County Commissioner Says but One Grand Juror from His District.

TREAT RICH AND POOR ALIKE

Says that the law is that a legal voter is eligible to jury service and names were taken from list.

The first statement of publication of County Commissioner John C. Lynch in connection with the technical defense made by lawyers to recent grand jury indictments was called forth today by an attack on him in a newspaper.

"I want to say in connection with the World-Herald's picture of my 'fine, artistic hand,' that I never was guilty of corrupting any state or county treasurer, nor any other public official.

"There was only one juror from my district who was a member of the grand jury, but so far as I am concerned I believe in indicting rich and prominent crooks just as well as poor ones.

What the Kids Are Saying in the Public Schools of Omaha

Special Trust Officer J. B. Carver had found the daughter of a colored woman a troublesome little body to deal with. She would not go to school, and the trust officer was compelled to visit her home several times.

"Dead, Mister Truman Officer, we've slipped one over on you this time," said the mother.

"How have you done that?" Carver inquired.

"Tillie's dead," said the mother, and to prove it showed him a clipping from a newspaper, giving an account of the death.

A new interpretation was placed on the "emblem of liberty" by a little Polish boy in one of the city schools. He was just getting the hang of the English language.

"That is the emblem of liberty," the teacher said, pointing to the flag, "and now what is an emblem?"

"It's what the dead or injured is carried in," the boy explained, confusing the word with ambulance.

Omaha Library Workers Who Are Going Abroad to Study

Two of the young woman librarians who have been attached to the staff of the public library for a number of years have been granted leaves of absence and are going abroad the last of May. They are Miss Hannah Logasa, 541 North Central boulevard, head of the department of statistics and accounts, who has been a library attendant since 1904, and Miss Elizabeth Stewart, 615 Chicago street, children's librarian, who began her service with the library in 1907.

It is an unusual coincidence that although both will go on their leaves of absence at the same time and sail for Europe on the same day, Miss Logasa will sail from New York for Havre, while Miss Stewart will sail from Boston with a tourist party for Naples. Miss Logasa expects to be gone four and a half months, returning in October, but Miss Stewart has arranged to be gone a year. She plans to spend the summer in travel and will visit the principal cities of Europe. When winter comes she will go to Germany and study, paying special attention to the German language, with which she is already familiar.

Before sailing Miss Logasa will attend the annual convention of the American Library association, which meets in Washington, D. C., the last week in May. She will also attend the annual sessions of the Library Association of the United Kingdom, which will be held at Oxford, poles near the schools for the birds to build their nests in this spring.

Some of the houses have as many as forty rooms. The bird-house idea, it is said, began with Henry Ford, who, in addition to distributing $10,000,000 among his employees, built a bird house of about 100 rooms and placed it on the lawn at his home.

Students say the birds will flock to the houses as soon as they are put in place. Manual training students in the grades of the public schools are building bird houses, which will be set on tops of high poles near the schools for the birds to build their nests in this spring.

Miss Hanna Logasa

England, the last of September. Her time abroad will be given over entirely to travel and recreation in the British Isles, France, Germany, Switzerland and other countries.

In Paris she will meet her brother, Charles, who is studying art there. She is a native Russian, having come from there direct to Omaha with her family when she was only three years of age. She does not remember having ever crossed the sea, however, and Miss Stewart has never been abroad, so the trips will be a great novelty to both.

Miss Logasa is well known to many patrons of the library, because of her ten years of service in an important capacity as well as because of her continuous residence and education in Omaha. After she finished the public schools here she later took special work at the University of Chicago.

Miss Stewart is a particular favorite among the many children who patronize the library, as she is in charge of their department, and is an adept at telling stories and fairy tales to the youngsters who take advantage of the privileges of the institution.
