ROURKE PLAYERS REST UP

But the Rest Was Forced Upon Them by the Weather Man.

NEED OF PRACTICE EVIDENT

Batters Are Not Getting the Chance They Need Against Swift Balls for Pitchers Hold Back.

Monday was a bad day for Pa's athletes. The weather was unfit for publication and when the weather is in such condition it must necessarily go hard with all athletes who are anxious to enter the fray. The players reported at the ball yard Monday morning and Monday afternoon, but the workout was far from strenuous.

Beyond a few motions and playing pitch and toss nothing was done. Of course the athletes pranced around the park before hitting to the clubhouse, but most of the real work consisted of the scuffling and heated remarks directed toward those who furnish the weather around these parts. Some of the youngsters who are not as careful with their whips as might be wise cut loose a bit Monday regardless of the cold, but all old spavns never twisted a muscle and all throw balls were of the rainbow variety.

Johnny Goding and Pa Bourke are becoming very much prewed with the climatic conditions. The exhibition of the athletes Sunday, while not discouraging, was displeasing. Goding hopes to have a spell of good weather soon, so that the pitchers can use a little speed and put a little hop on the ball without fear of injury, both for the pitchers' sakes and for the batting practice. The players need more batting practice and while they can hit the boxers fairly well they were almost helpless Sunday before the speed and twists of the Lincoln pitchers. Pa demands good batting averages for his players and the only way to get them started is to have lots of practice.

DENIES DEAL WITH TYRRELL

President Says Charge Made in the House is Insult.

FALL PROPOSES A NEW DEAL

Senator Introduces Bill for Free Use of Canal to Boats in Conspicuous Trade of North and South America.

WASHINGTON, March 30.—President Wilson declared today that an account of the contradictory statements in the Baltimore platform, democrats should have no hesitation in voting for the repeal of the Panama canal tolls exemption. The president emphatically characterized the exemption as a subsidy and pointed out that one plank in the Baltimore platform expressed opposition to any subsidy, direct or indirect, while another plank declared for tolls exemption. The president asserted there should be no doubt among democrats as to which should take precedence.

The president reiterated that the exemption never was a policy of the democratic house, because it was passed through a coalition of republicans and a minority of democrats, the majority of democrats voting against it on the ground that it was a subsidy.

The president explained that even if the international situation, to which he referred in his message, had not arisen, he would have been opposed to the tolls exemption as against democratic doctrine. But, he indicated, however, that if it were not for the international situation, he did not feel that it would have been proper for him to question the acts of a previous administration.

No Deal with Tyrrell

Mr. Wilson talked frankly about the tolls controversy in congress, saying that the story that he had entered into a bargain with Great Britain, through Sir William Tyrrell, private secretary to Sir Edward Grey, was one of a number of results that had been introduced in the congressional debate. The president declared he wanted to express his regret that what had promised to be a dignified contest, with genuine differences of opinion, seemed to be degenerating, in his opinion, into an attempt to discredit the administration. He remarked that while it made all the more certain the result in favor of the administration, he thought it a great pity that public affairs should be handled in that way. He did not think all the opponents of the repeal felt that way, but such cold had been interjected into the controversy and he did not understand the motives for it. The president said he had no anxiety over any political friction in the democratic party over the result and referred to the repeal contest as a "conventionalness."

Fall Proposes New Deal

Senator Fall, republican of New Mexico, gave the controversy a new aspect by introducing a bill to forbid that tolls be levied on American coastwise vessels or those belonging to citizens of any country on this continent and engaged solely in trade between ports of North and South America, or both, and duly registered under the laws of the country of which the owners of said vessels are citizens.

He contended that it would work out to a logical conclusion the policies as originally contemplated in the Monroe doctrine. "It would be convincing to Brazil, Argentina, Chile, Mexico and other Latin-American countries on this continent," he said, "that the United States is in good faith in its announced policy of friendship and willingness to assist these countries, not only against the aggressions of foreign powers, but in the development of their own resources."

From an inviolable chair in the house, Representative Fingle, democrat of Florida, made a vigorous speech opposing the repeal and denouncing the attitude of Great Britain.
