Three Questions Involved.

Republican Leader Mann told the house three questions were involved in a repeal of the Panama tolis exemption-treaty rights, moral rights apart from treaty onstruction, and the economic policy involved. The economic question might be changed at any time, he said, but a decision on treaty rights must be a lasting one. He maintained that no construction of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty compelled the United States to charge the same tells on its own ships or those of Panama as were levied on those of other nations. "A reading of the rules to be observed by nations to receive equal treatment, he said, "plainly discloses that they are not applicable to the United States or Panama.

War Sure to Come

"Ingland's attempt to secure its conatruction of the treaty at this time is not for its present effect. It is for the long distant future. If we construct the treaty according to the English view, it is sure to rise and embarrass us whenever we have war with other countries. War is not desirable, but it is inevitable. We cannot always maintain peace.

"If we agree now to the English construction, it is certain that in the future when we have a war with Japan or China, or some other country, questions will arise in reference to their use and our use of the canal, especially as to war vessels, and in that time of stress we will be met with the contention by England. the present ally of Japan, or by some other country, that we have already construed that treaty in such a way that we cannot protect the canal without bringing protest from England or other coun tries, which will embarrase, if not defeat us in the war. "I want to treat England fairly and believe that under the construction of the treaty we have the right to do as we please in title matter, and that it is an unfriendly act of England now at this late date to insist on any other or time the crime was committed. Archer Drown, son of the late Judge A. N. Drowe, was shot and killed in his home on the night of October 24, 1913. His body was found twenty-four hours later and Mrs. Drown was arrested...

It was alieged by the police that Mrs. Down had contessed to relatives that she shot her husband as he slept, and later the testimony showed she visited Mrs. Marie Millar, whom the suspected of having allenated her husband's affections. and attempted to kill her. She anapped an unloaded revolver at her supposed rival several times.

The crime aroused unusual psychological interest because of the conduct of the woman in the hours preceding the finding of her dead victim. San Francisco's portola festival was in progress at the time, and, according to the testimony of witnesses. Mrs. Drown, who fled to that 'ty, entered upon the festivities with a hearty enjoyment that precluded the thought that gulty knowledge of a tragedy weighed upon her mind
