GOOD fellowship and brotherhood was much in evidence at the luncheon, reception dance and all of the affairs given for the visiting Michigan Glee club. The University club is, of course, filled with college men, and most of them were present at the reception dance and were looking for frat brothers in order to show hospitality to them.

"Any pie-eaters with the club this year?"

"Sure; I'm a pie-eater, and so is that chap over there and, come on and meet them."

"How many palutes? Why, the two redd'ah hair chaps are both palutes; I'll look them up for you. Say, here are some of your brothers. We are proud of them; they are on both the Glee club and the foot ball team."

"Well, I am a pie-biter, and I thought maybe some of my frat brothers would be in the club."

"Sure, that's my frat, and I want you to meet Brother Smith."

Omaha is probably the first place that there have been enough young women for partners for all of the dancers. Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Towle invited the young women of Brownell Hall as their guests at a box party and later they met the members of the Michigan clubs at the reception, and the men say they enjoyed Omaha the most of any place on their trip.

One of the leading comedians, Mr. Fellows, was a counter attraction to the ball room in the large parlor where there is a grand piano, and he entertained a large number of guests with piano selections, being able to play any piece that was suggested by his interested listeners. Mr. Fellows has had many offers to go into vaudeville and may possibly accept one after getting his degree next June.

Social Settlement Benefit.

Reservations for the performance of "The Tempest," which will be produced for the benefit of the Social Settlement Saturday evening at the Brandeis theater, have been made by the drama section of the Association of Collegiate Alumnae, the Wellesley club and Miss Janet Wallace, who will also have college women for her guests.

Additional interest is lent to the staging of the performance by the fact that Charles Porter, head stage carpenter at the Brandeis, assisted in the presentation of "The Tempest" twelve years ago when Frederick Ward and Katherine Kidder produced it in this city.

Among those who will occupy the Wellesley box are Mrs. James C. Dahlman, Mrs. James Adams, Misses May Somers, Corrine Starke, Gertrude Schermerhorn, Lydia McCague and Nona Bridge.

Hayward Petitions for Arbitration of a Dispute With Moise

A business dispute between Harry W. Hayward, owner of the majority of stock of the Willow Springs Brewing company, and Walter Moise, brewer, his partner, is to be arbitrated in district court as the result of the filing of a petition by Hayward.

The plaintiff alleges that an agreement made last January, by which he was to take over Moise's interests in various business enterprises has been violated and that the latter still retains a stock building at 1512 Howard street, two promissory notes for $4,000, signed by Nels Thorson, a share of stock in the Nebraska Telephone company worth $300, claims a life insurance policy worth $2,338, failed to secure extension of a $10,000 note and has circulated damaging reports against the brewer.

The court is requested to restrain the payment to Moise of a part of the purchase price now held by a local bank and to award damages.

STECHER AND PARDELLO MATCH TO DETERMINE MUCH

The approaching wrestling match between Joe Stecher of this state and Leo Pardello, wrestling comedian from Chicago, will determine much for Omaha sport fans. Up in Dodge county they herald Stecher as the coming champion of the world and, as he has beaten everything he has encountered they have grounds for their assertions. In Pardello he will meet a man who knows the science of the game, and if he shows good against the Italian, he will be recognized in Omaha as a comer. In case Stecher wins from Pardello Saturday night at the Krug, an attempt will be made to match him with Hussane.
