order. The best remedy is S. S. S., as it influences all the functions of the body ts neutralize the irritants or waste products and to stimulate their excretion through the proper channels.

Rheumatic sore threat is a dangerous indication, as it means that the blood is loaded with more uric acid than the kidneys can excrete, and may thus lead to serious general disturbance.

The action of S. S. atimulates cellular activity. It prevents the accumulation of irritants in local spots. It enables the arteries to supply quickly the new red blood to replace worn-out tissue.

For this reason uric acid that finds the throat an easy prey to its breaking-down influence, is scattered and eliminated. In other words, S. S. S. prevents chronic conditions by enabling all the mucous linings of the body to secrete healthy mucus. Its influence is shown in a marked improvement of the bronchial tubes, whereby the huskiness of voice with thick, grayish expectorations is overcome. S. S. R., well diluted with water, means a blood bath, since it is welcome to any stomach and at once gets into the blood.

S. S. S. is free of all minerals and contains ingredients wonderfully conducive to well-balanced health.

You can get it at any drug store, but do not accept anything else. There is danger in substitutes. S. S. S. is prepared only by The Swift Specific Co., 528 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga. Our Medical Dept. will give you free instruction by mail on any subject of blood disorders. Write today.

Salesmanship is Service

Ability - ability to sell it = success, Salesmanship is the power of persuading others to accept you at your own estimate, the estimate upon which you can continue to "make good." This is as precise a definition of salesmanship as I am able to frame. As applied to merchandise, it needs only a change of terms, not of essence.

Salesmanship is persuading your man to buy what you have to sell at a price which means permanent satisfaction to him and a profitable compensation for your own labor.

Anyone who has the selling instinct and a reasonable amount of the selling instinct and a reasonable amount of experience can increase the value of his own service and that of the goods he handles by just the amount of time, thought and energy which he puts into selling them.

handies by just the amount of time, thought and energy which he puts into selling them.

To many men the word "selling" suggests unnecessary inflatation of prices, an added tax upon the customer, and taking advantage of the ignorance of buyers. The trend of modern sales development, however, is to give the buyer more and more actual service.

The only salesman who may feel safely entrenched is the one who makes sure that everything he does counts in service to the customer. By suiting his merchandise to the needs of his trade a retail clerk can easily build for himself a substantial following. If he will study his individuality he can influence the mental attitude of the prospective purchaser with regard to the articles which make up his employer's stock. Unless he can do this, his employer cannot afford to keep him.

Obviously the state of mind of the

Obviously the state of mind of the purchaser is a very weighty factor in determining the value of the article ne buys. For instance—the intrinsic worth of millinery does not change at all from year to year; but its value fluctuates constantly, because fashion, which is the mental attitude of the buying group, changes.

A certain salesman sells you a hat, a suit of clothes or a piece of furniture, in such a way that it affords you a great deal more satisfaction than would a similar article bought from snother salesman. Some who pretend to be salesman Some who pretend to be salesman hose sales because they do not know how to present to the prospective purchaser the merits of their wares. The intelligent salesman knows that we all buy things because the possession of them gives us a definite kind of satisfaction. He knows, too, that lacking a complacent state of mind with reference to the article purchased there can be no satisfaction.

The best salesman uses suggestion in his work. He strives to leave with the Copyright, 1214, by Jones and the salesman uses suggestion in his work.

purchaser the impression that the article has been bought voluntarily, rather than that he has been persuaded to buy.

The salesman's opportunity to give

The salesman's opportunity to give the customer real service becomes more apparent when we consider the seiling of a sitchen range, a sewing machine or an automobile. Here he has a chance to demonstrate to the prospective purchaser that the construction and method of operation of the range, sewing machine or automobile will give him economical and adequate service. In the last analysis, the man who buys an automobile cuys go many hours of pleasurable transportation, or so many mices of dependable locomotion. It is certain that the salesman who acquaints the buyer with all these points which enable him to use his automobile to the fullest advantage increases, its life and very materially decreases the cost per hour or per mile of the service he gets.

The traveling salesman who calls on dealers eventually becomes a competent counsellor on merchandising, financing and trade-building. One sees why a dealer might pay such a man more for merchandise than he would pay elsewhere, and still be better off, both in the matter of aggregate sales and profits, and more permanent business.

The salesman has made himself in-both in the matter of aggregate sales and profits, and more permanent business.

The salesman has made himself indispensible who knows he carms in actual service to the buyer every cent he receives from his employer. He will never be laid off. Every salesman who aspires to be something more than a necessary link between buyer and seller must realize that his salary and expenses are included in every sale he makes and that he is either a burden of a benefit to the consumer.

The clerk who renders the buyer definite service, and has this clearly in mind, sas taken the first step toward something better. Once the elements of his service to the buyer are clearly outlined in his mind, he is fired with ambition to do just such a work for more huyers, more than he can wait on personally. Which means that he soon needs assistants to whom he can delegate a share of his duties. Then he finds advertising necessary for him and his assistants to give their customers the very best service.

Unon every human being the responsibility of salesmanship rests. It is a duty which cannot be escaped.

Every man and every woman has nossibilities of usefulness which must be marketed. Ry "marketed" I do not mean that ability must necessarily be exchanged for money. It must be given a chance, the most complete use of it must be made.
