AUSTRIA AND RUSSIA AT OUTS

Diplomatic Relations Between Empires Practically Suspended.

BOSNIA INCIDENT UPSETS THINGS

Contest for Political and Religious Control of Balkan Region Brings Conditions to a State of Near War

VIENNA, May 13 .- One of the shrewdat members of the diplomatic corps in Vienna, when asked recently about the relations between Austria-Hungary and Russia, bluntly answered that there were none. For the last two years there practically has been no Russian ambassador at the court of Vienna. Nominally, of course, there has been an ambassador. but he has always found some pretext for being absent from his post, leaving the official duties to a councillor of embassy, who has carefully abstained from doing anything. Similarly, Austria-Hungary's diplomatic representation at St. Peteraburg has been almost equally perfunctory. Count Szapary was appointed up to the present has spent only three vaguely ascribed to family reasons.

For some time past there has been considerable tension in the relations betwen the two empires, the precise reasons for which are difficult to explain. The whole situation is full of complications. There are religious and racial questions involved affecting primarily the two countries gione. Then there is the old rivalry for predominance in the Balkana and finally the many differences between great European war was inevitable, but, transport his troops when necessary. the triple alliance and the triple entente. which exert a most important influence on the relations existing between the individual countries in each group.

Bosnia Incident Upacts Things. Up to the time of the Austrian annexation of Boania and Herzegovina in 1908, the relations between the two countries had been apparently quite friendly. They had made a working arrangement in the Balkans regarding conditions in Macedonia, and although it had not accomplished much, everything was moving along smoothly. But the precipitate move of the late Austrian foreign minister, Count Ashrenthal, in the annexation of Bosnia, upset everything. The Russian minister, Iswolsky, felt that he had been duped by his Austrian colleague and eands of Russian roubles are alleged to never forgave him, Since then Iswolsky has been Austro-Hungary's bitterest enemy, and since he is one of the most influential personages in the Russian national committee he has been able to make thing very disagreeable in many respects for the dual monarchy. Indeed there is very good authority for believing that an Austro-Russian war was very near just before the Balkan war broke out in the fail of 1912. It was only through the strong personal efforts of the venerable Austrian emperor, Francis Joseph that such a catastrophe was prevented. It is thought that Emperor Nicholas was just as much opposed to a war, but he is! no politician and by no means strong enough to hold back the firebrands in the Russian national committee. Personal Relations Cordinl. So far from tending to clear up the complications in the Balkans the recent wars have left the situation more complicated than ever. Count Witte, the Russian statesman, recently declared that only the first act in the great drama has yet been played. Now is the interval be-nobody knows-perhaps a year, perhaps only a few months.

Canr Wins Over Roumania. One important result of the Balkan con flict is the change in the attitude of Rumania towards Austria-Hungary. Ur to a few months ago Rumania was always looked upon as being the friend of Military strategists, indeed, in considering Austria-Hungary's strength usually added Rumania's five army corns. But in the negotiations over the treaty of Bucharest, Russian diplomatists cleverly contrived to place Austria in an unfriendly position towards Rumania.

Count Berchtold's efforts to secure evision of the treaty in the interests of Bulgaria gave great offense to the Rumanlans, who have always been very jealous of the threatened supremacy of that country in the Balkans. Rumania's geographical position compels it to rely either upon Austria-Hungary or Russia. And if the dual monarchy is going to side with Bulgaria, Rumania will have no alternative but to turn to Russia. But here again dynastic views must be taken into account. King Charles is a strong ruler, who has always been friendly to Austria and neither he nor his ministers are likely to be greatly moved the armistice lasts." ambassador to Russia last October, but by popular outbursts. Talk of General War.

From the violent of the articles rehappily, this view finds no support in responsible quarters. The truth is that occurred recently to excite much irritation between Russia and Austria-Hungary. Austria introduced very vexatious passport restrictions on the frontier, zales. which caused much annoyance to Russian travelers. Galacia is said to be swarmed with Russian spies, while Russian Poland is overrun with Austrian secret agents. There has been a series of espionage trials in Vienna, where the accused have been shown to be in the direct employ of the Russian military attache and contrary to the usual practice in these proceedings no attempt was made to keep secret the name of the foreign country implicated. Many thouhave been spent in trying to corrupt the poor peasants in Galacia, while Austrian splea have been doing their utmost to persuade the Poles across the Russian frontier that they would be much better off under Austrian rule.

There have been other things, too, of importance. Russia has been spending large sums in increasing its military forces in Poland along the German and Austrian frontiers and also is building some hundreds of miles of new railways for strategic purposes. It is believed that France is urging it along, having made tween each tent. Miners of each nait a large lean upon the understanding that most of it would be spent on armaments.
