You will be in company of farmers who are going to make a critical inspection of this land, and who know when they see a good farm. If some one wanted to give you $1,000 a year, would you take it?

The New York farmer, because of his The New York larmer, because of the proximity to the world's greatest market, and the consequent high prices of his crops, and because of a larger average yield, gets from $6 to $11 more per acre for his farm products than the Nebraska farmer. That's from $600 to $1,000 more on a hundred acre farm.

Do you want that extra $1,000?

At least come and see how the New York farmer does it. Come and see the prosperous farms, comfortable homes, convenient arangements, and his crops of

The trip will open your eyes to the fact that these farms present the best oppor-tunities for development or investment, of any farms on the market today. Prices lower than in the middle west.

Those who put out short lines for de-very in July doubtless felt that there Those who put out short lines for delivery in July doubtless felt that there would be trouble in securing enough of the yellow cereal to even up their outstanding contracts, but in this they were sadly mistaken. The drouth and the severe deterioration in many sections of the west cut down the offerings of cash corn to a minimum. This brought partial disaster to the shorts, while it made big money for the longs. Word was received here yesterday that in sections of the south and southwest farmers are feeding wheat in the absence of corn. Reports telling of these facts were generally believed.

Reports telling of these facts were generally believed.

The shorts in July corn refused to go into the pit and try to make purchases until they discovered that it was impossible to secure the corn for delivery. They have been buying quietly, but persistently, for some weeks past. It was said yesterday that large private settlements were made with the longs on Wednesday afternoon, as the shorts were chabled by this action to save money rather than go into the pit and cover their lines. Cash corn was 2024c higher.

money rather than go into the pit and cover their lines. Cash corn was 262% higher.

The situation in wheat was decidedly weak yesterday, as shown by the less of Sc in the July future. For several days past the strength in corn has been of more or less assistance to wheat and it may possibly have restrained the bears somewhat yesterday, but the conditions failed to help the general prospects for the wheat market at the present. Cash wheat was 1621c higher.

Oats followed the changes in corn in a moderate way yesterday. Cash oats were in higher.
