"Mong Doo!" They are wearing furs in Paris. The Omaha colony in Paris are sending home some interesting letters concerning the autumn styles exhibited during the month of August. The well gowned women of the gay French capital have been wearing dainty boas or ruffs of tulls around the neck the entire summer, but during the last few weeks real furs are being worn, fox scarfs being especially favored. To be sure, the ate abroad is vastly different, and owing to the extreme heat, local fashion leaders have not donned their new autumn clothes as early as usual.

To return to Paris, however-this is the way to see the new autumn styles-you make a formal call at Malson Blank or whatever great dressmaker you wish to call upon. You are ushered into an attractive drawing room and presently the models walk in and you choose your costume. The Omaha women write that "every" gown, whether for street or evening, has the allt skirt.
