Treasury Women Rebel at Order to Bar Powder Puffs

WASHINGTON, Sept. 5.—Indignant women with skinny noses are threatening the peace of the Treasury department as the result of an order issued by Assistant Secretary John Skelton Williams forbidding clerks to carry handbags, lunch boxes and other packages into the big treasury building. This has been accepted by the 800 women clerks as a direct attempt to eliminate the powder puff. Assistant Williams retorts that the order is a precautionary one solely.

"How on earth can a woman keep the tip of her nose or her neck presentable?" demanded an indignant woman clerk, "when she is denied the one thing with which to do it? It is a man-made order and a man probably isn't supposed to understand. Anyway we are drawing a formal protest against it." "But," it was suggested, "you might carry the puff and powder in your stock."

"A splendid idea," sniffed the women in chorus. "There are men in every room. We'd make fine spectacles of ourselves under such an arrangement."

Under the new order all packages and hand baggage must be left in the locker room in the basement of the building before the clerks actually pass into the part of the great granite structure devoted to the housing of Uncle Sam's cash and securities. This, the clerks say, is risky and they object to inviting personal losses.
