DR. RICHMOND SPEAKS HERE

Preaches Two Sermons at the Westminster Church and Talks at the Y. M. C. A. in Afternoon—May Be Called to Church.

Rev. Louis O. Richmond of Terre Haute, Ind., delivered the sermon yesterday in the Westminster Presbyterian church, choosing as his text a message from Paul: "I am not ashamed of the gospel of Jesus Christ." Rev. Mr. Richmond is a forceful speaker and his sermon was a strong one. He came to Omaha Saturday on the invitation of the new pastor committee of the Westminster church. His sermon was a "tryout" both for the congregation to judge if they liked his style and for Rev. Mr. Richmond to see if he liked the congregation. Everyone spoke favorably of his sermon. He leaves for his church in Terre Haute tonight. In case the committee decides upon offering the call to him, it will be offered some time in the next three weeks.

Yesterday afternoon he delivered a sermon in the Young Men's Christian association building and last night he conducted the services at the Westminster church. A large crowd was on hand to greet him at the church, both at the morning and night services.

In his sermon Rev. Mr. Richmond spoke of three grounds that were the source of pride in Christianity. The first, he said, is pride in the founder, Jesus Christ; the second its followers, and the third the fruits or results of Christianity.

Christ No Ordinary Man. "Some people ask, 'Wasn't Christ just an ordinary man?' or 'Wasn't He just a man better educated than those around Him?' You may go through history and find men better educated than those around them—great leaders in war, industry, arts and science," he said in part. "But always you will find something lacking—some vice, some weakness. But nowhere in the life history of Christ do you find one weakness. Christ was not an ordinary man. And the time has come when people are not ashamed of believing in Christ.

"The time has come, because there are no divisions nor secretaries of nations. We are all people, common people, and this fact is becoming more evident each year. How far is China from us? Several thousand miles? No. Just a little piece outside of San Francisco. How far are England, Germany and France—thousands of miles from Omaha? No. Right outside of New York. And what has brought about all this great change. Christianity.

Missionaries Brave Men. "When the average man thinks of the forefathers of Christianity, he thinks of some milk-and-water, mushy missionary. As a matter of fact, the real missionaries are real men, brave men, fearless men. Through them is the world becoming more and more Christianized. Right now, as I speak to you, American pickles are being sold in Egypt, where people are seeing what time it is according to a clock made in New England and wondering if they are too late for the train from Tokyo to somewhere else in Japan.

"What is the greatest benefit to mankind—science, civilization or religion? Science, it is true, has changed the sea, the air and the land. Science has made wonderful discoveries, has unearthed mummies and stone tablets. But what has science done for the soul of man? And civilization. Civilization, it is true, is a great assistance in many ways. But it paves the way for sin. The railway, the steamship, the private launch—all of these conspire to quicken dissipation and sin. Among the three, religion does the most good for man's soul. And that is a mighty precious thing."

Omaha Railroader Who Has Hard Fight in North Woods

George M. Entrikin, division freight agent for the Wabash railroad, living at 422 Farnam street, has been the object of much banter by his friends over a fight which he had with a wild animal while he was camping in the forest of northern Minnesota, near Rice lake, with a number of well known Omaha people.

It seems that every year or two one or two new persons go to this lake as the scene of a "war" between a man and a bear. This year George Entrikin was lucky enough to go. The first night there he thought there never was a wilder or more desolate place in the world and expected any moment to have a bear or wild cat come sneaking out of the woods.

It was on the third night after Entrikin reached there that he lay awake listening to the call of frogs, and as he supposed wild animals, that he fell asleep with his mind filled with thoughts of these man killers. It was shortly after midnight when he awakened and saw in the corner of his tent a gleaming eye fastened on him. Entrikin turned his head, but the gleaming eye still shone out of the darkness of the room.

For several minutes Mr. Entrikin tried to devise some means of escape, but at last, in desperation, he picked up a long piece of wood and made it that gleaming eye. He swung several times and finally he felt several long, shap claws fasten in back of his night shirt and the Omaha thought he was gone. But when the claws refused to sink into his flesh he took off the shirt, lighted his lamp and there he found his artificial minnow caught in his shirt and the eye was still gleaming.

APPAIRS AT SOUTH OMAHA

New Horse Barns of Stock Yards Co. Nearing Completion.

PLAN FOR A FORMAL OPENING

Horse Shows to Be Held in the Big Buildings Are Among the Things Being Talked Of.

Within the next few weeks the Union Stock Yards company expects to have the new horse barns ready for occupation. No definite date has been set for the completion of the new buildings, but plans are being made for a formal opening of the big building at Twenty-ninth and L streets. As soon as the new building is completed, the old horse barns now in use will be converted into a modern garage for the benefit of the autoists who frequent the live stock market.

The completion of the new horse barns is expected to open up a new attraction in Omaha, from a social as well as business standpoint. Annually in nearly every large city, and particularly in cities that are live stock markets, a social event known as the horse show is given by the society folk of the town. It is the ambition of many of the local horse lovers that when the new barns and stadium have been completed and equipped Omaha society will take advantage of the conveniences adapted to a successful horse show. Several attempts have been made heretofore to develop an annual show similar to the horse shows of other large cities, but always at a financial loss, because of the inadequate existing facilities and lack of proper show places. The new building will be able to accommodate all kinds and practically any reasonable amount of horse flesh, leaving several large sales rings and seats for the spectators. In addition the new barn is reached by the cross-town line, which runs directly in front of the entrance.

The building will be used for the annual meeting of the sheep men this fall in order to allow an exhibition of prize sheep and lambs.

Manual Training School.

As soon as the manual training department of the high school has been equipped, Superintendent Graham proposes a public demonstration of the work to be done by the students. The old building at Twenty-fourth and J streets is now in course of renovation and reconstruction in preparation for the opening of manual training classes. Superintendent Graham says he is anxious for the citizens of the city to see the work to be done by the new department of the high school. He says the work of the trade schools, now gaining in popularity throughout the country, is becoming more popular with laboring men as it is getting to be better understood. The superintendent is anxious to have the laboring men and the union leaders of the city see just what the schools are trying to do for the boys who find themselves without inclination for higher academic studies or for professional or clerical life.

Falls and Injures Skull.

Sam O'Connor, an old man residing at Twenty-second and S streets, fell last night while under the influence of liquor and injured his skull. Dr. Humpal dressed the wound and the police locked O'Connor up for safe keeping. O'Connor insisted that he had been assaulted by someone, but the police say he fell.

Falls from Car.

F. A. Risler while attempting to alight from a street car last night at Twenty-fourth and N streets fell and cut himself severely over the left eye. He was brought to the South Omaha police station, where Dr. Humpal dressed the wound and pronounced it not serious. Risler was to be under the influence of liquor when the accident occurred. He was taken to his home at Forty-eighth and B streets.

HOWELL MAY BUY NEW MACHINE FOR WATER PLANT

General Manager R. B. Howell of the Metropolitan Water district is considering the purchase of an automatic mechanical feeding machine to handle the coagulant at the Minnetonka station. A party of Pittsburgh men, representing the manufacturers of this machine, are meeting with the general manager. At present the coagulant is deposited by a chemist, who must judge the amount to use as the flow through the intake pipes varies. This machine, Howell says, would, by means of apparatus operated by the flow of water, measure the coagulant and deposit it with an accuracy which a chemist could not obtain. The machine costs from $8,000 to $10,000.

Rev. Mr. Williams May Be Called to an Eastern Church. According to rumors circulated among members of the congregation of the First Methodist church after yesterday's services, Rev. Milton B. Williams, who, as the result of certain differences of opinion, had previously announced that the church authorities would have no opportunity to reduce his salary because he was not going to stay in Omaha, will not be long without a pastor. It was said on good authority that a committee from an eastern church was present at the services and that if it was pleased with the pastor's work he would immediately receive a call to a new field of endeavor. Color was lent to these rumors by a remark of Rev. Mr. Williams, who, in reply to a question whether he had any idea where he would go when he left Omaha, said that certain things were "in solution." Yesterday was Rev. Mr. Williams' last Sunday as pastor of the First Methodist church and he delivered a sermon on the "Efficiency of the Blood of Christ." He told the congregation that "as we look into our hearts and see selfishness and worldliness and lust and sin we see that we are akin in some degree to the murderers of Jesus." He declared that Christ died that all may be sanctified in a life of simplicity and usefulness and that his death was symbolic of noble life. Every man that has lived unselfishly and who has stood for a cause has aided in the uplift of humanity, he said. The pastor urged that pledges of money made by church members be paid "at their earliest possible convenience" and said that the finances of the church were in good condition if the pledges were promptly paid.
