A Wonderful Sale of Silks

Involving Several Thousand Yards of the Very Newest and Most Favored Weaves, Colorings and Patterns of the Season, and Even in the Face of a Short Market Offered to You at a Remarkable Saving

IT'S a sale that's sure to set a new high water mark for value giving in Omaha. Months of careful planning have been given over to the preparation. With this event in mind, our representatives scoured the silk market from end to end, picking up a lot here and another there which were offered at an underprice for one reason or another, keeping everlastingly at it until this great assemblage was brought together for your choosing, beginning here Monday morning. It's a sale of unusual magnitude. There are tints, patterns, colors, designs by the hundreds—the very cream of the world.

There's every favored weave, in the season's smartest and most desirable colorings and patterns. Silks for every purpose for which silks are intended and the best part of it all is the fact that you can benefit by saving advantages that are simply unmatchable.

The entire main aisle on the first floor as well as the big silk section has been given over to the display and sale. Every woman who has new clothes to make will want to pick and choose among the fine fabrics and there could never be better picking and choosing than now.

LA VICTOIRE CORSETS

THE LATEST PARISIAN MODELS

THE easy, willowy step which shows no trace of stiffness or effort, the long, clinging lines of the skirt which give the appearance of slenderness are dependent entirely upon the corset which has bust, waist and hip lines in just the proper proportion to each other.

Nowhere in the whole world have the makers of corsets so carefully worked out these proportions as in Paris, nor do any others know so well how to manipulate the proportions to produce truly wonderful figure effects.

How well we know that the appearance of a gown can be multiplied two-fold or entirely destroyed by the figure and carriage of the woman who wears it.

LA VICTOIRE CORSETS will do much for the woman who lacks the perfect lines of present fashion and will give an erect, stately carriage with wonderful ease to every wearer.

The Price $4.50 to $12

WAR SHORN OF ITS GLITTER
Reduced to a Business Proposition Which Holds No Place for Heroism.
The glory, the sport, and the romance of war are dead. Heroes are out of date. They interfere with team play. Fashion's leaders will please apply for employment certificates from an army and a navy. The only thing left in the world is the war of business. War has become a business as it is conducted as a department store. Its victories are to the scientist, the mechanician, and the organizer—the laboratory, the card index and the telephone. "While I save the chief of staff on the long distance this evening, I will ask him to give you a pass to go with the army," said the prime minister of Bulgaria in the midst of the war of the Balkan allies against the Turk.

It was as simple a matter as the New York office of a corporation calling up its Boston office. On off, the chief of staff, was not at the front. He managed the war without ever being near a battle, surrounded by his department heads and experts, he was situated in a town well to the rear of the army at the focal point of his wires, since any vital "Hello, Central!" would instantly reach him.
Bravery alone did not win for the allies. The Turks also were brave. But their concern went to war with a deadlock among the board of directors, one set of orders from the president and another set from the general manager, the plant in constant, the shipping department on a strike, stock heavily watered, and short-term notes due in a few days, with call money at 100 per cent.
An army is a great industrial corporation which moves most of its plant on wheels and legs. Its functions are the most inclusive and complex of any corporation, and it should be the most up-to-date. Other corporations get their results from month to month and year to year in profit and loss. They are in touch with the test of sales. An army gets its real test only in war.
A private corporation may be out of date and keep on doing business for a while. It may travel on prestige, dis-daining improvements and letting office dead wood continue to gum the wheels, but no army and no navy can be unprogressive and stand the trial of war. Whatever new invention appears, you will find the fighting forces of the world the first to use it if it has any possible application in their profession.

The most dramatic moment in recent military history occurred when a German military dirigible had to descend in France because of engine trouble. The French officers had a peep at the great German mystery, and found, to their delight, that it had not a single appliance that was not already known through the hidden processes of the French intelligence service. Therefore, the military corporations demand the ablest inventors. Not long ago the plans of our new battleship, the Pennsylvania, not to mention the plans of a new 16-inch naval gun, disappeared from the Navy Department. The plans for the first dreadnought, which the British navy tried its best to keep secret, were in possession of every first class European navy before its keel was laid.
A single invention may decide battles. The fact that the Krupp recoil for field guns was not so good as the French. In the actual test of war, was worth a score of regiments to the Bulgars armed with Canets, while the Turks were armed with Krupps. There is no more martial romance in perfecting a field gun, or in assembling the parts of a battleship and organizing a battleship's crew, than there is in perfecting automobile motors and organizing an automobile manufacturing plant.—Frederick Palmer, in McClure's.
