High School Band Players Return to Organization Fold

All boys of the Central High School band, with the exception of one leader, who, it is understood, was not encouraged to follow the others, abandoned the strike and returned to the band they quit because Bandmaster George Green had enrolled four negro boys.

Principal Kate McHugh of the high school and Mr. Green called the meeting yesterday afternoon and the boys signed up for a new band without reference to the colored boys.

Green gave the strikers notice that they would keep on playing in the band or go back to cadet drill, which as members of the band they escaped. Principal McHugh and members of the high school faculty approved Green's position. The affair was not taken to the superintendent of the Board of Education.

The band leader said the boys he would take their old instruments in exchange for new ones after they had enrolled.

AFFAIRS AT SOUTH OMAHA

Charles Hawkins Kills Robert Tucker in Saloon.

HAD TROUBLE IN POOL HALL

Murderer Left to Get Gun and Returned, Opening Fire as Soon as Victim Was Located.

A fight in a pool hall yesterday afternoon between Charles Hawkins, a negro sheep butcher employed at Armour's packing plant, and Robert Tucker, a negro residing at Twenty-seventh and F streets, resulted in the killing of Tucker by Hawkins in the independent liquor house at 230 South Twenty-eighth street a short time later. Hawkins fired four shots at Tucker and three of the bullets took effect. Tucker died at the South Omaha hospital at 4:30 o'clock, about an hour after the shooting. Hawkins escaped, but was captured last night near the Rock Island depot.

Witnesses of the shooting say that Tucker was drinking in the saloon when Hawkins came in from the pool hall owned by Howard Stearns, which is located at 233 South Twenty-eighth street. Hawkins remarked something about getting Tucker and started shooting at close range. Of the four bullets fired by Hawkins, one bullet passed through the chin of Tucker, another lodged in his right arm near the shoulder, while the third bored through the abdomen in the region of the stomach.

As Tucker fell Hawkins is said to have coolly turned and viewed his victim with the remark, "You ain't dead yet, eh," and was about to attack the prostrate man a second time when a negro woman interfered and prevented any more shooting.

Hawkins is known as a good workman. Some time ago he served time in the county jail for an attack upon Percy Jackson, another negro.

How Trouble Started. The trouble in the pool hall occurred when Tucker was playing pool with Ben Stearns, a brother of the proprietor. Hawkins entered and offered to wager against Stearns' success in the game. This started trouble between Hawkins and Tucker, which grew into a fight when Howard Stearns wanted the men, Hawkins leaving the place. He went to his home at Twenty-seventh and F streets, secured the gun and returned to find Tucker, when the shooting occurred.

It was several hours before Hawkins was arrested. He was found by Police Captain John Zaloudek and Officer Lloyd Drummond at the Rock Island station at 5:30 o'clock, evidently awaiting an opportunity to leave town. He refused to make any statement about the shooting further than to say "I had to do it."

Tucker was about 30 years of age. Hawkins is about five years younger. Mayme, the 6-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Thomas, living at Twenty-fourth and Jackson streets, South Omaha, died yesterday of lockjaw resulting from a scratch from a rusty nail several days ago.

Immediately following the injury, the little girl appeared to be as well as usual and the wound started to heal. Blood poisoning ensued and last night lockjaw, which resulted in her death this morning, set in.

After years of waiting the residents of the northwestern section of South Omaha were given a more direct access into the business section of the city when the F street viaduct was thrown open yesterday.

The bridge was completed some weeks ago and the work of constructing the approaches begun. Tuesday the work was finished and Wednesday City Engineer Best looked over the job for defects. Yesterday the barriers on the bridge were taken down and the public was allowed to come and go by the new route.

It was remarked that scarcely had the bars been removed from the bridge approaches that the traffic began to follow the new route.

The opening of the new viaduct means much to the people in the northwest section of the city. For years they fought for a viaduct, but it was not until City Attorney Henry C. Murphy took the matter up and made a fight that the railroads finally agreed to erect the bridge. City Attorney Murphy and Assistant City Attorney Winters fought the case through the courts successfully and the railroad company finally went to work on the bridge last year.

Krug Forgets that He Owns Lot Samson Is Now Occupying

When Dad Weaver decided to hold the Ak-Sar-Ben carnival at the present location, he hid himself to the office of Al Krug to secure permission to use the lot that is owned by the Krugs at Seventeenth and Howard streets. The lot includes 397 feet front and ninety feet deep at the main entrance of the grounds and was absolutely necessary.

Krug readily gave his consent for the use of the lot and stated that anything the Ak-Sar-Ben wanted, which he could possibly furnish Samson, could have it without thanks. Weaver left the Krug office highly elated over his success and didn't even try to borrow money, so great was his joy.

But when the carnival opened yesterday, Krug appeared in the secretary's sanctum sanctorum and yelled lustily for the mighty oak. Whereupon Dad emerged from his seclusion and inquired as to the wishes of the caller. Krug asked Dad how he liked the weather and rolled off a few more irrelevant, irresponsible and incoherent questions and remarks before he got down to business.

"Say Dad," inquired Krug, "what is the chance for me to erect a sign on this lot by the entrance?"

"What are you trying to do?" returned Weaver. "Is this a joke?"

"Why, no," responded Krug. "I would like to erect a sign here and I want your permission. I don't care what it costs."

"Well," said Dad, "I can't for the life of me figure out what you're talking about. If you want the sign, you get it and I don't see where I come in. It's your lot. Go as far as you like."

Mr. Krug, had forgotten, he owned the lot and could do as he pleased with it.

Wholesale Charges to Be Made Against Telephone Company

Labor Commissioner Charley Pool will, it is understood, within the next few days file complaints at Fremont, Norfolk, Grand Island, Lincoln and Omaha, charging the Nebraska Telephone Company and the Lincoln Telephone and Telegraph Company with violations of the nine-hour law for feminine workers.

The labor commissioner has been collecting evidence in Omaha recently and has conferred with representatives of the telephone companies, some of whom desire to test the new law.

It is the labor commissioner's opinion that the nine-hour-a-day law is violated whether girls work all the time or "snatch a nap" while on duty, a practice permitted in some of the stations.

De Lor is Churlish Since He Has Again Been Put in Prison

Marvin De Lor, highwayman with a penitentiary record, captured Wednesday at Pacific Junction, Ia., is "soldiering" at the county jail and making his attendants all the trouble he can without openly rebelling. Yesterday he took twenty minutes to dress himself while the guards patiently waited. "Look at him," said Jailer Cahill, "he looks like he was busy, but he is far from it."

De Lor apparently is posing as a "stunt man," for he says nothing to the guards or other prisoners and obeys orders solemnly. He was captured by the county hospital last July. He will be tried in district court on a charge of robbery.
