

RECALLERS SEEKING A MAN

Difficulty Found in Lincoln to Secure Candidate Against King.

EXTRAVAGANCE IS CHARGED

Everybody Connected with New Insurance Board Receives Salary After Long Wait Except Commissioner Brian.

(From a Staff Correspondent.) LINCOLN, Sept. 28.—(Special).—"A man, our kindred for a man," is the cry of the recallers in the capital city who desire that Commissioner King shall be turned out of office and some other patriot elected to fill his place.

The fight upon Commissioner King is that he has been extravagant with the people's money and has gone beyond the law in allowance of claims and salaries and in increasing the pay of those under his department, the bureau of public safety.

They can find plenty of men, so they claim, who will sign a recall petition, but cannot find anyone who is patriotic enough to want to go up against King on the recall proposition.

As far as Lincoln is concerned, the new recall law has been nothing more than a proposition which has been kept in keeping up a continued strife and a series of knockings against those who are in by certain parties who are out. It has been the means by which dissatisfied persons could keep up a continual fault finding with officials and keep the city in a turmoil most of the time.

Thirteen delegates to the American Good Roads congress left Lincoln last night for Detroit, where will be held the third session of that organization.

Among them were President A. Barnett of the Coast-to-Coast organization of McCook and Secretary George E. Parise of Minden of the same organization.

The delegation will favor the transcontinental route backed by the new organization just formed. However, there may be some sort of a fight brought on in an effort to change the route, which follows the Union Pacific railway through Nebraska, to the other proposed route which passes through Lincoln and the southern portion of the state.

Goes Into Theater in His Automobile

A man in a little runabout insisted last night in seeing the performance at the Brandeis theater from the seat of his automobile. There is no provision in the playhouse for parking cars and consequently the privilege was denied to the stranger.

Early in the evening, just after the box office at the Brandeis opened, a stranger, considerably under the influence of liquor and driving a small runabout south on Seventeenth street, upon reaching a point opposite the theater, turned his machine toward the entrance and drove into the lobby, where he stopped and demanded tickets for himself and car.

POLICE BATTLE IN DARK CELLAR WITH ROBBERS

"Damn that bound!" cried Ferris, leaping through the ice box door. Cunningham pulled open the door of the ice box and another hall of steel-capped bullets poured out.

One of the bullets struck Cunningham in the right thigh and another hit him in the groin, taking an upward course and lodging in the stomach. "I guess I'm done for, Chick," exclaimed Cunningham to Ferris as he felt the pain shooting through his body.

Cunningham shoots to kill. Straight into the ice box he walked and when the desperado's pistol cracked against the flash betrayed the owner's whereabouts.

When the cellar lights were switched on the bandit was found with several bullet wounds in his body, but one shot had pierced his heart. A search for the dead man's partner was begun, but the latter escaped, it is thought, when the shooting commenced and was not noticed by the officers, who were too busy trying to get the man who was shooting.
