EDUCATIONAL

THE CRY OF THE INCOMPETENT

Untutored, unskilled in any one line of endeavor, crude, yet strong in a physical sense, some five-bits of ambition sting him. "He arose and went forth into the busy business world. "Give me, Oh, someone give me the secret of making money. Grant that I may do and be and see and feel what I want most," he cried. He went to a great publisher. "Show me the way to make money," he whined. "Certainly," the big man answered, "let us the circulation and the business we are entitled to $12,000 a year in your case. Begin now. Your salary has already started. Move right into the front office. "But--I'm afraid I can't--" "I see. You just want a job. Good. Take the elevator. Six dollars a week." He departed. With head lower, he went to a great base ball manager. "Show me how to make money," he whined again. "Easy--easy. Just the man I want. Knock 'em over the fence every week and--and never mind the salary. Ask it and you'll get it." "But--I'm afraid--" "I see. Pardon me. You just want a job keeping the grounds. Sorry. We already have a wicketman."

BOYLES COLLEGE

you remember, a few years ago. Took shorthand and bookkeeping--yes, and Salesmanship, too, I understand. Look at him now! First six months he was a stenographer for one of our department managers. Then, when my stenographer got sick, I tried him in my office. Was so pleased with his work that I gave him a job as my secretary permanently. But--that ambition gets that you inculcated him with up there at Boyles College would not let him be content with a Secretaryship. So, I had to let him go out on the road. Though our youngest salesman, he is one of our best order getters and he is easily worth more than the $2,000.00 I pay him. And he says his Stenography TRAINING helped him more than any other one thing enter our MID-WINTER TERM
