SENATOR BROWN'S TRIUMPH

His Income Tax Amendment to Constitution Adopted.

HIGH HONOR FOR NEBRASKAN

Moderately Calls Attention of Senate to Fact that Thirty-Sixth State Has Ratified the Proposed Amendment.

(From a Staff Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—(Special Telegram.)—When Senator Brown late this afternoon rose to inform the senate that thirty-six states, through their legislatures had ratified the income tax amendment, Wyoming and Delaware being up and tuck in making the amendment part of the constitution, the senior senator reflected the pride he felt in being the author of the resolution that made the amendment possible.

While the statement was couched in a simple language, it was none the less impressive, for it confessed that without the support of William Howard Taft the passage of the resolution might have been well nigh impossible. He gave it to and brought it out of the committee to be sent eventually on its way knocking at the doorway of state legislatures for ratification or rejection.

It is no small honor to have one's name attached to an amendment to the constitution, but such honor belongs to Senator Brown, and he very naturally showed his gratification that the requisite number of states had finally ratified the amendment, a rich new honor, number sixteen of the constitution, the first to be adopted since civil war times.

Great Step in Advance.

"Of course the ratification of the resolution by the requisite number of states is very gratifying to me," said Senator Brown, during the course of many congratulations tendered him when the action of Wyoming and Delaware became known. "It is by far the longest step in advance and in the progress of the American people since Lincoln's war amendments to the constitution were adopted."

"While I take a personal pride in being associated with the authorship of the resolution proposing the amendment, the fact is the senate failed to take any action thereon until President Taft insisted by special message to congress that the same would have favorable consideration at its hands. That special message resulted in the resolution and to President Taft belongs the gratitude of the American people."

"Due proclamation will be made of the adoption of the amendment, and then congress will enact legislation putting the amendment into force. Such legislation, however, will not be undertaken during the present congress, leaving the whole matter to the incoming administration."

Foreign Mission for Hitchcock.

Now that it is almost certain William Jennings Bryan will be the premier of the next administration and sit at the right hand of Woodrow Wilson when he assumes the office of president, friends of Senator Gilbert M. Hitchcock are prophesying that the Omaha editor will be tendered an ambassadorial position to round out his career in the public service. A number of men from Nebraska who happened to be in Washington last week, in discussing the rumored acceptance of the portfolio of secretary of state by Colonel Bryan, thought Senator Hitchcock would have a hard row to hoe if he became a candidate for reelection to the senate, as he would probably have the opposition of the "Commoner" and his friends; but that if Senator Hitchcock desired to leave the senate shortly after the new administration came into power and desired an ambassadorship in Europe or in the east, Colonel Bryan would aid him with all the influence at his command.

SHERIDAN, Wyo., Feb. 4.—(Special Telegram.)—Mike Malone, Willie Ritchie's sparring partner, took the count tonight in the eighth round of his twenty-round fight with Pete Jensen, the Battling Dair, although leading the fight in practically every round, the Denver boy was powerless against the heavier and better trained Dane and was unable to land effectively at any stage of the game. Throughout the fight Jensen apparently toyed with his lighter opponent in the closing rounds hitting him at will.

TO AID JUVENILE OFFENDERS

Richardson Reads Bill He Has Had Prepared for Legislature.

DENOUNCES PRACTICE OF PAPERS

Lands on Publication Which Used Names of the Boys Recently Mixed Up in the Scandal in Juvenile Court.

Asking support of a bill which he has had prepared, making it a misdemeanor for a newspaper to publish the names and addresses of juvenile delinquents James Richardson, member of the Board of Education, bitterly attacked the newspaper which printed the names of the boys mixed up in the scandal aired recently in juvenile court. No action was taken by the board in support or condemnation of the bill. Richardson said:

"There has recently been exposed through the agency of the press of this city, a shocking condition of juvenile immorality, the real extent of which is as yet unknown. I would not, Mr. President, take this occasion to refer to the matter, were it not for the prominence which the papers have given to the alleged fact that the accused children are students in the Omaha public schools; and along with these statements has gone the unavoidable implication that some inherent defect exists in our schools, which is chargeable with the inception of the resulting depravity."

"While the papers have in subsequent reports gradually reduced the number of offenders alleged to be public school students, and have arrived at the facts in the case, at the same time the original articles referred to have gone their way over the country, producing a false and vivid impression of our school system abroad.

Parents at Fault. "But, Mr. President, if all the children involved in this scandal were public school pupils, instead of there having been only one girl and one boy who were such, as is now admitted, I would still maintain the injustice and unfairness of the inference. Conditions in our schools are clean and moral; our teaching force of the best experience and the highest ideals, and I submit that when the conditions in the schools are such, the blame for bad conditions without, rests entirely on parents and guardians, as the direct result of their carelessness or indifference to the profession of raising their children to good citizenship; because they alone are responsible for the discipline which is only enforceable outside the school room."

Another angle to this situation, sir, and in my belief a far more important one, is the result upon the future of the children whose names have been published to the world as guilty of the crimes charged, and in this connection it is with pleasure that I can credit The Bee and the World-Herald with a conscience which prevented their publishing the names of the poor children, whose sins were at least no greater than that of their parents. It is a shame that the News can not be so credited; instead, with unfailing sensationalism and enterprising filthiness and brutality, the News did its dirty best to destroy whatever of potential good citizenship may be left within its victims, and this after sufficient punishment had been or was being meted out to them by the proper authorities.

Need Drastic Remedy. "A drastic remedy is needed—one that will not hamper the juvenile court in its humane work of saving the erring child to the community and to society-at-large; one that will permit the publication of its records of these cases, because publicity is essential to the knowledge of the community, but one which will at the same time prevent conscienceless rascals who would destroy the future usefulness of boys and girls who still have, or may have, within their breasts potentialities for good, from accomplishing their devilish purpose."
