By MELLIFIUGA. Wednesday, February 12, 1913.

FIRST, the women's tailors held their national convention, and it was decided to have the coats shorter and the skirts narrower. Now the men's tailors are holding their convention in Cleveland this week and next season's styles are being patterned along similar lines in that the men will wear shorter coats and tighter trousers. We are also advised by press dispatches from Cleveland that it is going to be not only possible for a man and his wife to have suits made from the same bolt of material, but that as a fashion this practice is to be encouraged at the convention. Another variation, that came to my attention, was that while this convention is primarily for men's tailors, women's artisans were also invited.

It has been predicted that by and by—after men and women have explored the maze long enough—they will all be brought to realize that each is concomitant to the other and that they help themselves in the same proportion as they help each other.

Whether or not this is the first step of fulfillment, is, I submit, immaterial. But how charming, how attractive won't it be to see Mr. and Mrs. So and So taking the occasion to be dressed in blending attire.

Lectures at Sacred Heart.

The first of a series of lectures given by the Sacred Heart Alumnae association of Park Place, Omaha, was given this afternoon at the academy at Thirty-sixth and Burt streets. A most interesting series has been planned by the association—the first four lectures to be given by Mr. Sidney Woodlett of Boston, who has a national reputation on the lecture platform. His subject this afternoon was "King Lear." Thursday he will lecture upon "Tennyson and the Passing of Arthur." Friday, "The Tempest," and Saturday "Hawthorne." The lectures are given at 4:30 in the afternoon. March 14 and 15 at the same hour Dr. James Walsh of Georgetown will lecture upon "The Women of Two Republics" and "Contemporaries of Shakespeare." Miss Bertha Baumer, Miss Marie Woodard and Miss Reba McNamara are the committee in charge of the lectures.

"Cascarets" Best for the Bowels

The millions of Cascaret users never have headache, constipation, biliousness or sick stomach.

It is more necessary that you keep your bowels, liver and stomach clean, pure and fresh than it is to keep the sewers and drainage of a large city free from obstruction. Are you keeping clean inside with Cascarets—energetically forcing a passage every few days with salts, cathartic pills or castor oil? This is important. Cascarets immediately cleanse and regulate the stomach, remove the sour, undigested and fermenting food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the system the constipated waste matter and poison in the intestines and bowels. No odds how badly and upset you feel, a Cascaret tonight will straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep. A 10-cent box from your druggist will keep your head clear, stomach sweet and your liver and bowels regular for months. Don't forget the children—their little insides need a good, gentle cleansing, too.—Advertisement.

HUMAN FACE ON MONSTER

Navy Attache Tells More Than Fish Story to Comrades.

FISHERMEN HAVE SOME DEVIL

Old Salt Refuses to Fish with Others Because He Feels They Would Queer His Luck for Fair.

The "Rhyme of the Ancient Mariner" contains little more of mystery and thrill than the fresh sea breeze brought to the "land lubbers" of the local recruiting station by John E. Tucker, who has recently been assigned to recruiting duty here. Tucker might have told a fish story, had he chosen to be untruthful and conventional. But he did not. He told a story of his biggest catch, which was not a fish at all, but a green monster, red like in shape, with great sharp spikes from head to foot and with what, by the dim light of a lantern, seemed frightfully like a low type of human face.

"It cured me of angling by night, hanging to a coal ladder with only a lantern to work by," said Tucker, as he spat a big sea gob, and combed the salt-out of his hair with his fingers.

"It was off the coast of Florida. I used to fish for shark there and caught several good sized ones. It was easy to have them hoisted on the deck and then knife them. On this night, though, I was fishing for red fish. Old Steve, the cook, was fishing alongside of me. Nobody on the ship could fish with Steve but I. He was an old crab, and when anybody else would come around he would take up his reel and quit. He said it was skin' his luck. He said most fishermen had some of the devil in 'em and the fish wouldn't bite well. The wickeder the fisherman, the wickeder the fish that would come to his hook, was what he used to say. And they polluted the whole water of the neighborhood and made fishing worse and worse.

Attracts Evil Fish.

"Well, somehow, this old Steve got used to me and believed I wouldn't attract any of the evil fish. On this particular night Steve and I climbed down the ladder and dropped our lines. He told me then why he never fished with other fellows, because he said some of the wicked sea men he had fished with in the early days had attracted evil sea monsters to the waters and one an ex-irate had caught a kind of human-faced green eel with sharp spikes all over its body. After that the cook said he had no luck fishing for two years.

"Old Steve raised his hand to heaven and swore that if he ever laid eyes on such a monster again he'd never more drop bait in the sea. "It wasn't more than a half hour after that my line gave a jerk and a snap. I yanked her up hard, and the green monster was hurled wriggling and almy, practically into my face. I just escaped the point of some of those grey spikes.

"I got just one glance in the dim light of the lantern. I saw the idiotic type of human face on the green monster. Both of us let out a yell. I dropped my pole and scrambled up the ladder. As I turned to go up I could just see old Steve scrambling over the railing. He had gone up the ladder like a Panama monkey. "He kept his word. He never dropped a line again."

Counterfeiting Hearing Postponed Till Later in Month

"I ain't ready for trial. I ain't even had any dinner yet," emphatically shouted Richard D. Barton, one of the four men charged with passing counterfeit coin, when the four were brought before United States Commissioner Herbert Daniel in the federal building yesterday afternoon. "When a fellow lays in a cold stone cell in the county jail without anything to eat for four days, I guess he ain't hardly ready for trial."

The four men were George D. Nicholson, Richard D. Barton, George H. Neff and Frank Zane. They were arrested a week ago in a police raid on 7th North street. In the course of the raid some loose coins were found stored away in the bed ticking. As Secret Service Agent Mills was subpoenaed in a federal case in New Orleans and had to leave yesterday afternoon, the hearing could not proceed, for he is one of the principal witnesses for the government. So the case was, consequently, continued to February 21 at 10 a. m. and bond was fixed at $2,000 for each man. All emphatically announced they could not furnish the bond.

Grant Corps Honor Soldier Musicians

Grant corps No. 104, a branch of the Grand Army of the Republic, held a reception at the residence of Mrs. F. B. Bryant, 65 North Forty-first avenue, yesterday afternoon in honor of the five civil war veterans, or "Old Soldier Fiddlers," as they are termed in professional life, who are entertaining thousands at the Orpheum this week with their rendering of old-fashioned songs. The guests of honor were Colonel J. A. Patten, late of the Twenty-fourth Michigan infantry and Battery B, Fourth United States artillery—iron brigade, and a member of the First army corps that opened the first day's battle at Gettysburg July 1, 1863; Corporal G. A. Ford, late of the Twenty-seventh Connecticut infantry, and Major Joseph M. Norcross of the Second New Jersey infantry; also Captain A. W. Miller of the First Virginia cavalry and Major G. H. Hammerley of the Virginia state militia. The last mentioned were confederate soldiers who, fifty years ago, fought in the same battles with their union companions with very different feelings than they now entertain for each other. Colonel Patten, who heads the organization, bears the distinction and honor of forming one of the bodyguard which accompanied the body of Abraham Lincoln to its last resting place. At the reception the veterans recounted many interesting personal experiences in the great conflict and flitted the entire list of their old-time tunes up to the delight of those present.
