IMMIGRATION BILL VETOED

President Disapproves Literacy Test for Foreigners.

TO TRY TO OVERRIDE NEGATIVE

Secretary Nagel's Report Denouncing Language Test as Radical Provision Based on Fallacy Adopted by Taft.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 15.—President Taft vetoed today the Dillingham-Burnett immigration bill...

In a short message to the senate in his own handwriting the president announced his disapproval of the measure solely because of the provision which would lock the doors of the United States against the alien who could not read some language or dialect.

The veto message was accompanied by a letter to the president from Secretary Nagel, denouncing the language test as a radical provision based upon a fallacy in "undertaking to apply a test which is not calculated to reach truth and to find relief from a danger which really does not exist."

Senate and house leaders lost no time in arranging for an effort to override the veto. As soon as the message was read Senators Dillingham and Simmons and Representative Burnett leading congressional supporters of the measure, made arrangements to take it up in the senate on Monday and in the house on Tuesday.

Opponents and proponents of the proposed law have waged a vigorous contest in hearings before the president for the last ten days. Organized labor warmly supported the bill, while several organizations, particularly Jewish societies, protested against the provision for detaining immigrant inspectors and matrons on vessels flying foreign flags...

Like Law Vetoed by Cleveland. This is the second time that a literacy test for immigrants has been vetoed by a president. Grover Cleveland having refused in 1897 to approve a bill barring aliens who could not read and write.

of regard. They went away and others came. On the last day there were two or three cases of flowers and a box of home made candy neighbors and friends had brought.

There were no richly priced American Beauties among the flowers, but they had been given with a spirit that does not always accompany the more expensive gifts.

Simply, quietly, apparent utter freedom from any desire to avenge a wrong. Mrs. Morse and her son responded to questions of the story of their experiences. It is a testimonial—a testimonial of the searing of a conscience and the hardening of a soul eaten by the cancer of greed.

History of the Case. Here is the story: Some time in the autumn of 1911 Walter Morse began to be troubled with a growth, the exact nature of which was in doubt. As it continued, refusing to succumb to remedial treatment, anxiety of the young man and his mother and brother increased.

Reputable surgeons advised an operation. This was performed about February 19. Temporary relief was the result. The surgeons had said the operation might not be entirely successful and within four months their fears were realized. Another operation was advised. The Morse family hesitated. They decided to wait at least a little while. Weeks passed; then months. The affection had become so malignant and so painful that Morse was on the point of submitting to another operation when Mrs. R. Bauer, 6108 North Twenty-third street, a neighbor, urged him to consult "Doctor" Hornby.

"Doctor" Hornby. The "doctor" had removed for Mrs. Bauer some things that looked as if they "might turn into cancers." He had said they were "blood cancers." He had removed them "with the knife."

So highly was the "doctor" recomended that Mr. Morse went to his office and consulted him early in the week, beginning November 17. Mrs. Morse thinks it was Monday. She said if she remembered correctly she was washing that day and she always washes on Monday. "Doctor" Hornby diagnosed the growth as sarcoma, which is a connective tissue cancer. He said it would have to be removed by surgery. This announcement was surprising and disheartening to Mr. Morse, who above all things had wished to escape the surgeon's blade. "Doctor" Hornby insisted that the only hope lay in operation, followed by his treatment for six months. He said he had a good surgeon, Dr. Myra A. Wells, one of the ablest in the city. Mr. Morse said he could approach the operating table with fewer misgivings if a male surgeon were employed. "Doctor" Hornby said he would have no one but Dr. Wells to operate; he would not trust any other surgeon, fearing they would steal his secret. Mr. Morse was prevailed upon to meet "Doctor" Hornby at Dr. Wells' office for a consultation the following day. Dr. Wells confirmed "Doctor" Hornby's diagnosis and counseled surgery. Mr. Morse was advised that the entire cost would be $200 and hospital bills; $150 was to be paid before the operation and $50 after recovery. "Doctor" Hornby said there would be no charge unless a cure should be effected.

Operation Consented To. Mr. Morse went home to consult his mother and brother. They thought no expense should be spared if there was a chance for restored health for their son and brother; and, anyway, there would be only the hospital bills to pay if the operation and treatment should be unsuccessful. "Doctor" Hornby and Dr. Wells were advised of the family's decision as soon as the family had made arrangements to get the money.

At about 10 o'clock Friday night, Dr. Wells, with her automobile, called at the Morse home and took the patient to the hospital. The following morning she operated. Early in the afternoon Dr. Wells telephoned to Mr. Morse, advising her that the operation had been performed and the outlook was bright and asking if she would come to the office and pay the first half of the fee. Mrs. Morse hurried through her work, but when she reached the Conservative Savings and Loan association she found it closed. It was after 1 o'clock.

Money Paid Over. Mrs. Morse found Dr. Wells and her husband, P. A. Wells, and "Doctor" Hornby in Dr. Wells' office. She explained why she had not gotten the money. Mr. Wells suggested telephoning one of the officers of the association, but the idea was not acted upon. It was agreed that Mrs. Morse should get the money that night, when the association's offices reopened. Dr. Wells volunteered to go with her. This plan was carried out. Mrs. Morse had the money placed to her account and gave Dr. Wells three checks—one for $80, payable to Dr. Wells; one for $20, payable to the hospital. The last named was for a week's care at the hospital. Dr. Wells explained that out of her $80 check she would pay $5 for administration of ether. The money returned to Dr. Wells' office, where "Doctor" Hornby received his check from Dr. Wells.

Mr. Morse remained in the hospital about three weeks. The first three days he knew nothing. During the three weeks Dr. Wells called upon him twice daily. "Doctor" Hornby looked in two or three times during the three weeks and saw the wound.

Dr. Wells told Mr. Morse his case had been a serious one and for a time it had been feared he would not recover consciousness after the operation. She said "Doctor" Hornby had not treated him at all, the case being one in which Hornby's treatment would do no good.

Hornby Treated Him Not.

"Doctor" Hornby also told Mr. Morse he had not treated him. After Mr. Morse left the hospital Dr. Wells telephoned for the balance of the money. Mrs. Morse went down and paid it, one check to Dr. Wells and one to "Doctor" Hornby, each for $75. "Doctor" Hornby never has treated Mr. Morse. He has called once at the Morse home and said he believed another operation necessary. Recently Dr. Wells called, declared she had operated "too far down" and offered to perform another operation, this time free of charge. She also promised that in this case "Doctor" Hornby's treatment should be given.

Mr. Morse asked her how "Doctor" Hornby's services were worth $150, since he did not apply his remedy. Dr. Wells told him she did not know; that was "Doctor" Hornby's business and not hers. Mr. Morse said the cancer, or whatever it is, is worse now than ever before. In addition, an important gland that before the operation seemed perfectly sound now is out of its natural place. Dr. Wells admitted that by accident she may have severed a chord affecting this gland. She attempted to correct this trouble by an osteopathic treatment, but unsuccessfully.

IF YOU THINK THE OLD WAY is better than the NEW WAY then you will know that Dr. Todd advertises to reach thinking people, because they know that his double value teeth look better, wear better, feel better and are more sanitary. The old style "half tooth" in many cases is only a pretense of dentistry. Would a half tooth look as good as a full tooth? Investigate and think it over. Dr. Todd 403 Brandeis Bldg. Omaha P. S.—It would be a good idea to turn a new leaf and think of food working under your old "half tooth," bridge work and the unsanitary condition it must cause.
