ROMANCE OF "KING" ADAMS Adventurous Life of Monarch

Swan Island in the Carlbbean Sea. Alonzo Adams, the monarch of Swan island in the Caribbean sea, and famil-iarly known as "King" Adams died at the Massaschusetts General hospital of The story of "King" Adams' life reads like one of the most interesting of romances. He was born in Ellsworth, Me., and early manifested a desire to wander about the world. He went to sea and followed this career for a number of years, first as a fisherman and later on sailing vessels plying between this country and various ports in distant parts of the world. Nearly twenty-five years ago he engaged in coast trading in a little fishing packet which he owned. About this time a number of men became interested in the mining of phosphate in the Caribbean sea and formed the Albion Chemical company. This company chartered the fishing packet ewised by Adams, with him as master, and fitted the world. Nearly twenty-five years ago out the craft to locate one of the phos phate islands off the coast of Cuba and mine the product.

The passage of the vessel was stormy but it finally reached the island, which had been charted. The company's venture proved to be unsuccessful. Adams, however, had faith in the proposition and after the company had relinquished its claim he assumed control, subduing the natives and setting up for himself a government of which he was king. His island became a stopping port for all passing vessels.

Having established himself in control he proceeded to develop the mines and sell the phosphate. The island was divided by a rocky channel. As a whole the territory is forty miles in circumference and five miles wide. On the more dangerous shore of the island "King" Adams caused to be erected, after some years of prosperity and home comforts. a lighthouse to warn vessels off the perllous reefs, and also for signalling purposes. All skippers in those seas knew Captain Adams personally, and would stop on signal.

He frequently made trips back to the United States, visiting Boston about every five years, and purchasing all his supplies and luxuries from this country. He finally married and took his bride to live with him on this island. There they raised a family of two boys and one girl, One of the sons recently has lived with the father and mother on their farm at Easthampton and the other son became a dentist, and is now living in Brooklyn. The daughter is also-living in that city. About three years ago Adams sold his right to the island and came to this country to spend the remainder of his days, purchasing the farm on which he lived until his final illness.-Boston
